During the war, there were strategies and there were cooperative operations that were applied by the soldiers, however, every now and then, they loose a member of their troops. No one really knew what was going to happen next. Nobody among the six men knew who was next to die.

It was when he died that his family found his writings regarding the photograph showing the six men who raised the flag in Mount Suribachi in Iwo Jima. Upon finding his written work and reading it, they realized that the said account in history needed to be published and thus shared to other readers. In this book, it was clear that Bradley pointed out the hardships that the soldiers have experienced during the battle of Iwo Jima. It could be observed that through his narrative style of writing, he opted to show both the emotional and psychological impact of the war among the soldiers of the battle. He made it affirmed that the courage of the American Soldiers to fight for what is right and justified in their own views have made them the most remarkable soldiers of those times. Through his book, Bradley clearly gave a picturesque of the actual situation of soldiers before and how much the said situations are close enough to what the soldiers at present feel and experience during wars and battles.

Reaction The book of Bradley is indeed a must read. human history. Although the main idea of the book is to send the message pertaining to the courage and the bravery of the American Soldiers during the Battle of Iwo Jima, it also shows the actual situation of the soldiers who are sent outside the country to fight for the justice that they ought to believe in. The fact that they have to leave their families and on risking their lives for the sake of others not actually know when or how they are going to die makes the entire narrative of Bradley a basis of the actual emotions that the present soldiers feel when they are sent out to their assignments. Yes, up until this moment, wars have never ceased yet.

The society continues to engage in disputes, government against government, beliefs against beliefs and principles against principles. These are the reasons why people create possibilities by which their fellowmen would have a reason to create an enmity against them. Because of this, wars are then pushed through, many soldiers and civilians die for the crooked reasons of battling against their fellowmen, and some die even though they do not have anything to do with the war. It seems like as if people never learn from any written work such as Bradley's that they continue pursuing their own ways in creating disputes among all.

Conclusion and Recommendations True, men have been shedding blood through history. Because of war and continues disputes among nations, the clashing principles of governments, many soldiers die and some are becoming heroes of war because of the fact that they have courageously fought for the right thing that they believe in. However, it must be realized that wars are not the only way by which humans could prove their courage and their loyalty to their nation's dignity. Through the ability of man to do what is good for the majority shall also proclaim an individual the hero that he is inside.

Bradley's book is indeed a fine read and a clear picture of the ability of humans to fight with courage and strong will. Giving clarity to the said ability of humans, the "Flags of our Fathers" is a book recommended for everyone who wants to learn from the pages of history. BIBLIOGRAPHY James Bradley.
