

Educational history

History

I enrolled in Mentor College which is at my birth town of Mississauga at the age of four years. Between 1994 and 1997 at mentor college, I went through senior kindergarten and grade 2 respectively. However, my family was forced to move to Ontario following the demands of my father's career that required to change his place of work from Mississauga to Ontario.

At Ontario, I began my education at the Toronto French School in 1997. While at the school, the vigorous curriculum forced me to start playing competitive tennis as a refuge from the hard school curriculum. Though highly dedicated towards improving my tennis ranking through playing more tournaments, the school was however, not supportive towards students' athletics.

Recommendably, my grade improved from grade 3 to grade 10 in the 7 years that I spend in this school. The search for student athletics supportive school made me seek transfer to St. Robert Catholic high school in 2005. In my new school, I improved in the tennis rankings which gave me the insight of even playing tournaments of higher level. This was still demanding as it required more attention and time for its score.

Commendably, my new school was highly supportive an invitation which synchronized my efforts even towards traveling abroad in representing Canada in the international Junior competitions. In 2006, I transferred to Thornhill Secondary school from the demand of my situation that required non-traditional education. In my new school, I got an enrolment in its high performance Athletics program which was an invitation towards concurrently completing the required educational courses as well as traveling.

I spend one semester at the school after which I chose to finish the remaining credits at York Region virtual schooling program. This online program was a great incentive in studying abroad, traveling and providing substantial environment for developing time management and self discipline skills.
