With a loud grunt, he hugged the Brigadier, without waiting for his reply and this time the hug blocked the breath of the Brigadier. Outside the latched door, he heard lots of commotion, running around, wild shrieks and gunshots.

The confused Brigadier desperately sought freedom but the two hundred pounds weight of the bear provided no scope to escape.

He pressed harder and harder...deliberately with a specific purpose.

He tried to get to his service revolver, but the prompt kick knocked it and the revolver fell down at the feet of the bear. Brigadier heard the sound of his bones cracking as the bear tightened the grip and soon the Brigadier turned ex-Brigadier, with his tongue hanging and the eyeballs peeping out of the socket. Blood oozed out of his body from many outlets. It began to drip from the pores of the punctured veins/skin of the Brigadier's body just like drops of bile from the glands of bear undergoing torture in the cage in which it was once imprisoned.

The bear loosened the grip and the body of the Brigadier tumbled in a lump of flesh. The bear began stomping the body repeatedly, with loud grunts cursing humankind heartily for the cruelties inflicted on the fraternity of bears.

“ This one for keeping bears imprisoned in coffin-like cages, for extracting bile from bladders. You butchers keep us thus for fifteen years or till death— all this for producing shampoos, the so-called miraculous remedies and aphrodisiacs—you barbarians, rascals and scoundrels”

“ This one for lowering us alive onto beds of hot coals for cooking our paws—
