

What i would get rid of to improve life in the 21st century essay

Our lives are changing, the outstanding growth of our knowledge is increasing every day, yet our changing lives present increasingly complicated problems in an ageing society. Today's 21st century has much to sort out that may help the upcoming society. The excruciating examination process in which thousands of pressured students who are not fully ready to take an exam, must prove what they have 'learned' to aggressive and rapacious examiners, only a minority being selected in the vast marine of shinning students who have just been unchained of the shackles of school work and deadlines?

And the rest...? They are left to dry out in the harsh world, to be taunted for doing miserable on that one day, not being given another try. Exams deteriorate us and oppress our very lives making our everyday routine revising and reiterating for an exam that can determine our whole life. The 2 sided pages trap us into our failure, whilst the time ticks at its loudest, making us write nothing but a single letter on a line which finally concludes our end result. Of course if you are to do well, you are fine, but with the ever-changing ruthless mark scheme it's very difficult to do just well.

The pressure put on the fragile mind only gives the tormenter one choice under the stress leading to the examination. To give up! Even the polite and civilized students fall and loose complete confidence in them self's, feeling like they ruined there only last chance to shine. NO! It's exhausting having to prepare for an examination when the end result is marked so harshly, it puts the only courage you have down. Masses of tress being removed, the same tress giving us the air we breathe. Papers and papers and pages and pages...

All for a single letter on a line, is it truly worth it?

<https://assignbuster.com/what-i-would-get-rid-of-to-improve-life-in-the-21st-century-essay/>

Examinations should be banned from the education procedures to avoid any harm it does to the livelihood of a child's mind. Not only do exams ruin one's mind but so does the absurd amount of homework being handed out hurt an individual mentally. The main cause of a lot of homework is due to advanced technology. Teachers feel like because we have internet we suddenly know EVERYTHING! This is an insane thought as the teacher ought to be conscious of a student's attention span. It's shocking! We see something inventive and fool around for hours and hours, in the end, our work an absolute disappointment.

They believe we can achieve a full written essay for the next day in the aid of our computer. Indeed the internet is great help, however the greatest help of all, Wisped, is not approved to be copied, so we must refuse to accept the temptation of our surroundings and finish the work with every letter being our own. Imagine life without no homework that involves technology, which is ironic as the answers are all there; but it's a beautiful vivid image of stress free students who don't need to be upset or troubled.

Technology is also becoming extremely unsafe if it is not used correctly. Technology has introduced social networking sites, which can take advantage of a Chills vocabulary. Children do not get an opportunity to talk face-to-face and this is dangerous to their social skills to not only children but everyone, as hey do not have time to communicate, they can use text, email, backbone and other social networking sites, which can have them adapting to slang.

Social networking sites are not just hazardous to one's vocabulary but also because some are cyber bullied and groomed over the internet. I despise how people truly get satisfaction from hurting someone psychologically, but obviously this inane time pass to cyber bully is all thanks to the advanced technology we have today and I worry immensely for the future which is why I would like to get rid of the growth of advanced technology.