(http://www.nytimes.com/2011/01/11/world/asia/indian-diplomat-flies-home-after-indictment-in-us.html?_r=2) Summary of the Article

It is based on a jeopardized diplomatic relationship between India and the United States of America. It attempts to elaborate how crime is handled in India as compared to the United States. The main topic of discussion focuses on Ms. Devyani, an Indian Diplomat, who was arrested in the United States of America for having made false accusations in the United States as well as being in connection with fraudulent activities regarding her visa. In addition it attempts to elaborate the manner through which this issue was treated in different perspectives in the United States and in India specifically indicating that: The Diplomat's fame increased and her government believed that she was innocent. On the other hand, the United States maintains she is innocent, but release after India began showing mistreatment to the workers at the United States Embassy.

Connection of the Article to the Theme

Basically, the article focuses on the manner through which diplomatic relationship can be jeopardized by incidences of crime among the concerned stakeholders. In the article, an Indian Diplomat has committed an offense and is subject to arrest according to the Laws of the United States. However, in India, the matter is taken less serious and the Government believes that their citizen is innocent. This leads to a jeopardized relationship between the US and India as indicated by India taking awkward means to solve the challenges facing it i. e. through subjecting the workers at the US Embassy to Acts of Mistreatment.
