There were enemies who had to be confronted, and Americans needed to unite in order to succeed in their course of action. Captain America played a crucial role in the war since he carried the slogan and patriotism of the Americans even as they were confronting their enemies. He helped to raise patriotic consciousness, not only to the American soldiers who were in the battlefield but also to the Americans who supported them in any way. He helped to construct the identity and values of America among the Americans, who responded by uniting more than before during the time of war (Weiner 2). He occupied the most senior office in the land, the office of the president, and motivated Americans to remain united and patriotic at the time of war. The comic depicts captain America entering a room that was full of Nazis and punching their leader, Adolf Hitler on the face. This shows the daring nature of Americans soldiers who could not stop at anything until they defeat their enemies.
