Co -education is considered to be the best system of education. The most important parameter of a country's progress is education. So, it is not whether the school is all girls or the school is all boys, the school should be the guiding force where the schools are built to impart knowledge to the children. Gone are the days when girls were not allowed to go out by themselves and talking to boys was considered to be orthodox. Today can you imagine a workplace without women. All times have changed, girls today are keeping pace with men and they have to be groomed to face competition & challenges in their career. Once there is any point of segregating the girls and the boys and sending them to different schools, co-education provides the right base for a child's education, beside attaining college and understanding and respect for the opposite sex it is also important. It lays the foundation for a balanced individual. Co-education helps the boys and girls to intermingle and understand each other well.

They become more broad-minded and tolerant towards the opposite gender. They interact freely with one another, thereby overcoming hesitation and shyness. Thus, co-education leads to a healthy and harmonious relationship between boys and girls. Co-education moves out discrimination against boys and girls. Co-education also gives equality to both the sexes. In fact, boys become more conscious about their habits and behaviour, attitude and dressing sense. This not only disciplines the boys but also girls. This also helps in their future life.
