What does personal competencies mean?

- When I decide to choose my profession I need to prepare myself to engage in ongoing training and professional endeavor's.
- I need to enhance my skill levels and perform in a manner which is competent.
- I need to have professional goals and try to achieve them
- If I claim to very professional and I am not showing it, then I am just cheating not only myself but the others around me.

Why are the competencies important to my futures career goals?

- I need to know what is required and what I am doing because if not that would just means I do not have the necessary tools to reach my goals.
- By having high standers to reach my goals is to advance it. By reaching this level that means that competency will enhance my abilities to a better service.
- This just might give me the responsibility to get my foot in the door for a promotion for a higher spot or just maybe a raise.

How can I use my education with the competent in my career field

- Basically the competence and education go together. I use the term holding hands like they are dating because that is how close they are.
- Without having the education and training I will not have that professional competency.
- The place I work at does have incentives because they want their employees to stay a while and be part of the team.

- I believe to keep up with today society I need to make all the effort I can to learn how to adapt to changes.
- I plan on and will get my B. A. in Criminal Justice so I will need to have the education for that. This is defiantly a field that associated with education.
- I will and need to make sure I have all the education in my field if I plan on moving up the ladder.
- I believe the professional competency will always keep you informed. It will also help get you closer to your dreams as well as your goals.
