com I attended the NASA Space School in Houston, Texas during my summer holidays. I was elected by the school administration as the team leader of my school's team. The program was based on engineering tasks focusing on NASA's Mars exploration program.

One of the most difficult tasks given to us was to build a rover. As team leader, I strategically spent our entire budget to buy all the available wheels but my strategy paid dividends as later on; we were able to sell them to other teams at a profit. This allowed us to buy more resources which led us to our victory. We were successful and were awarded medals of excellence.

Hundreds of homes were destroyed in the floods that hit Pakistan in 2011. I still can't forget the traumatizing sights of my village where i saw a distressed woman with her new born child crying in her arms with two little children by her side. She had nowhere to go since the roof of her hut had collapsed. I took her to the camp that was created to provide aid and facilities to the affected. This time was very significant for me as I learnt how unpredictable life is. So many people wouldn't have predicted becoming homeless and helpless with the entire course of their lives changed.

I discovered the pleasure of contributing back to the society and those in need which made me realize the significance of volunteer work Activity (include your role/position) Referee Contact Info (name, role, email, phone) Description of responsibilities (125 word limit) Fund Raising; Head of Department of Social Events. & Editor-In-Chief of Eye on Lahore Zair Zahir Manger at Next Generation Pakistancom +923234950392 When Punjab suffered from flooding, I organised a convincing campaign under Next Generation Pakistan to facilitate the flood victims.

I was heading the department of Social Events which was responsible for arranging various events in the form of fundraisers. This was a great responsibility. I allowed creativity within my team where everyone had the autonomy to brainstorm and reach their maximum potential. It was a success for we collected Rs. 6. 2 million. Soon Eye on lahore, the first ever Pakistani internet youth portal, was launched. Being its Editor-In-Chief, this successful entrepreneurial venture prompted me even more to pursue IBBA and examine the standard framework of how people capitalise on investments. 4

Our awareness campaign over this issue has been our most successful work. We had made a documentary portraying the after effects of using drugs. My job was to carry out the necessary interviews in the documentary. To take our campaign to the next level, I decided to do something about the growing trend of underage smoking in our community. After discussing it with other club members, I lodged a police complaint against a local shop owner who sold cigarettes to underage smokers.

Rana Essay Questions 250 word limit for each response) A) Tell us why you want to study at the Schulich School of Business. As it is my firm belief that businesses can truly flourish if their internal structuring is sound, my hope is to provide in-house, economic and efficient solutions to Pakistani businesses to streamline their day-to-day operations. Therefore, I need a very rigorous specialized, academic and professional undergraduate degree in business studies for the realization of my ambitions. Schulich School of Buisness provides just that perfect blend for honing mypersonality.

It provides an excellent academic curriculum and also plays an extremely pivotal role in nurturing professional skills. The dense network of Schulich graduates in the business world will give me direct access to the top businessmen, entrepreneurs, venture capitalists and economists. Furthermore, the school's exchange program is another reason why i wish to study here. In this extensively interconnected world that we live in, an exchange term would open for me a global range ofcareeropportunities where I will be able to experience the diverse culture and business environment of different societies.

Moreover, the city of Toronto, as a radiant international social hub also appeals greatly to the passionate learner in me. I truly believe that polishing my skills from a university known for its mastery in business would propel me to enormous heights in my career and I am certain that if given the chance, I would give my very best to the program and prove myself a valuable asset to this prestigious institution. B) In an interview by a prestigious journalist, you've been asked to share your deepest thoughts on what motivates and shapes your leadership style and deep desire to succeed.

How would you respond? I have come to believe that life is leadership. To see it any other way would be a fallacy. Think about it. We live, so we lead our lives. And if we are not doing this, we are drifting into oblivion. To lead ourselves and consequently others, we must also follow - these are two sides of the same coin. We can follow our own ego or what others say, blindly; or we can choose to act wisely by deeply reflecting on what we observe, hear and experience. We need to relate these findings with the immutable laws of nature that govern life, before drawing any firm conclusions.

We grow in understanding and vision only when we become acutely conscious and aware of self, of others and of our environment. This ever-expanding awareness is the crucible where the sense of personal leadership begins to take root. You and I represent the zenith of a very long journey of humanity. In this context, I would define success as us being a vital part of this dramatically choreographed continuum in which we learn and share freely, with passion and with responsibility, all along, desiring the best for ourselves and for others, in terms of the abundance life offers.

What has shaped my thinking on leadership is the thought that as we grow in awareness and see more clearly, our responsibility increases - responsibility to not only benefit from our rich global heritage, but also to inspire others through our everyday decisions and actions. If continuous learning, living and sharing is not the essence of leadership, I wonder what is! 6 York Reference Number: 213127592 Initials: Z. Rana Please answer either question (C) or (D) C) Select two leaders - one you admire greatly and one you do not. Briefly outline why you see them as leaders, and why you admire one and not the other.

D) Recently, the role of corporations in society has evolved to take a more extended view of corporate citizenship, acknowledging and actively engaging in political roles. What do you think should be the role of multinational corporations in rehabilitating the areas stricken by Hurricane Sandy? Please critically discuss the process and social impacts of these multinational enterprises working as non-government organizations. Indicate essay choice: ? C or ? D Well I would go with more unconventional leader. One that I admire would be my friend who is the president of a local chapter of an international society called AIESEC.

I admire his leadership style because he leads by example. Setting standards for his subordinates and yet being humble at the same time. He provides a role model for his team members and guides them to get the specific goals and tasks that he assigns them. The channel of communication is smooth as he takes time out for every member and makes sure that he knows what's going on in their personal lives hence establishing a very informal and personal connection. I have rarely focused my attention on those whom I do not admire. I believe that such an endeavor serves no purpose.

We can and should keep our eyes open to learning from all those we come across. When we witness evil deeds, we realize the value of good. All human beings have potential for good and evil. Our job as leaders is not to harbor prejudice against any individual or group. Instead, we need to behave in ways that increases the likelihood in others of the good within them to surface and flourish. In my view, the root of all evil is our ignorance. Only the light of knowledge can illuminate our minds and hearts to the right path - a path that inspires all that is good in us.

However the leader that I won't like to follow would be my football team captain. He has a more commanding leadership style where he doesn't like criticism & works as a one man-army which affects the team equilibrium. Please provide an explanation for any repeated course(s) Thank you for your interest in the Schulich School of Business! Please check your MyFile account at <http://www.yorku.ca/myfile> for the status of your application. Schulich does not offer early admission. The first round of offers will be sent in March. GOOD LUCK! 7
