Abstract There are two sides of opinions about abortions whichever you believe is up to you. Some people think that having an abortion is the same thing as murder but much worse because you're killing an innocent child but some of these mothers have excusable reasons to get an abortion so this is where the question "Should abortion be illegal?" comes into play. Many of these mothers are in no condition either health wise or money wise to have a baby which some would understand having an abortion for but other mothers get an abortion because either the baby was an accident or they just don't want a baby at the moment which most people believe is unacceptable but making abortion illegal would mean none of these women get to have one so in this case it's either all of them or none of them, so you have to pick a side to his argument.

Should abortion be illegal? In the United States of America, it is legal for an expecting mother to get an abortion up to a certain amount of weeks but many people have petitioned and rallied to get abortions completely illegal in the U. S. There are many sides to abortion which is why it's a huge ethical question in the medical field. In this case, neither of these arguments are right or wrong, it all comes down to a matter of opinion.

Heading 1 Getting an abortion means you are intentionally ending your pregnancy usually during the first 28 weeks of pregnancy. Many Americans believe that life begins at conception which means that these babies are already human beings and therefore have a right to life. A Professor of Pediatrics at the University Of Utah School Of Medicine, explains that "the most primitive response to pain, the spinal reflex," is developed within eight weeks so the fetuses getting aborted are feeling pain.

It has also been proven that young women who have undergone abortion are increasing their risk of getting depression, anxiety, and committing suicide, therefore, it causes many of these young adult women psychological damage. Not only does it cause these women psychological damage but it also causes many of these women to have future medical problems such as risk of breast cancer but most of these women wouldn't know that because the doctor giving the abortion does not usually explain the downside of the procedure or the things that could go wrong with the patient. Many women in the United States cannot conceive children and because of this they turn to adoption but all these women getting abortions have reduced the number of adoptable babies from 90,000 in 1971 to 18,000 in 2007, instead of aborting these babies, women should give their unwanted babies to people willing to adopt the babies.

Abortion is also a form of discrimination when it comes to women aborting because of genetic abnormalities such as Down syndrome, it doesn't make them less human. These are all reasons as to why many people in America have chosen to be pro-life or anti-abortion. Heading 21 According to the US Supreme court abortion is "fundamentally right" so getting an abortion is in fact not against the law.

All women should have the choice to abort if they want to, giving them this choice gives them control over their own bodies. Embryos and fetuses are not yet independent meaning personhood starts after the fetus becomes "viable" not at conception. According to Britain's Royal College of Obstetricians, "most neuroscientists believe that the cortex is necessary for pain perception.

” Therefore the fetuses cannot feel pain yet while getting aborted. Letting these women have access to safe legal abortions reduces the risk of death and health problems from having these women get unsafe illegal abortions if a woman really needs to get an abortion she’s going to get one whatever the matter, is if it’s illegal or legal. Getting an abortion does not cause infertility you can get pregnant after the procedure. Denying these women abortions would cause many of them to become unemployed, to be on public welfare, and be below the povertyline.

Making abortion illegal would cause a lot of unwanted babies coming into the world which would eventually come to child abuse, psychological damage, maternal depression, or even physical violence during pregnancy.

Having abortion illegal would increase welfare cost to taxpayers by 225$ million in over nine years. Abortion also reduces crimes because many of these women are more at risk of having a child who would later engage in criminal activity, the mothers themselves would have to turn to engaging in criminal activity, and as I’ve discussed above illegal abortion. These are also reasons as to why many people have chosen to be pro-choice in America.

Heading 3. Both pro-life and pro-choice have good arguments for example, if you are Christian this is a huge reason as to why abortion is wrong, abortion is the killing of human being because in The Bible it does not draw a line between fetuses and babies but many religious organizations support women’s reproductive choice because The Bible doesn’t contain explicit condemnation of abortion.

International Journal of Epidemiology estimated that about 15% of first trimester miscarriages are caused by a history of abortion but a fertility investigation by Royal College of Obstetricians found that women who've experienced two abortions and women who've experienced two natural pregnancies have the same future fertility. The Southern Medical Journal found that women who aborted were 154% more likely to commit suicide than women who carried term, a peer-reviewed study found that women who were denied abortions "felt more regret and anger" and "less relief and happiness" than women who were not denied abortions. None of these arguments are right or wrong which is why abortions a huge ethical problem in the medical field.

Heading 4. Under many circumstances, abortion is not always right or wrong. Would you consider abortion wrong when a rape victim becomes pregnant and chooses not to have the baby? Or when the mother has a health condition where her life would be at risk if she had the baby? Many of these mothers would rather give the baby up for a chance to have more babies in the future rather than her dying and not having the chance to meet her baby or have more babies and not to mention that the mom's health being in a bad condition could cause the baby to not survive and they could both end up dying. These rape victims are between all ages, should a twelve-year-old victim have to go through with having a baby because abortion would be illegal? Not only are these victims young but some are also victims of incest in this case, should the child have a choice of having the baby aborted? Many pro-lifers believe that if you thought you were responsible enough to have sex you should take up the responsibility of having the baby if you ended up pregnant but in this case, the victims didn't have a choice should they also not have a choice but to have the baby? All of these questions is what makes abortion an ethical problem. If abortion was illegal these mothers would not have a choice in this matter. Heading 5. In my opinion, I believe abortion should stay legal, everywoman should have the choice and access to abortion. I do believe aborting the innocent baby with no reason is wrong but it is the woman's choice and that's not always the case many of these women who get abortions are under circumstances where they should have the right to choose if they want to have the baby and making abortion illegal would just make it wrong and unfair for them.

God has a plan for everybody and if you feel like this is the right choice for you then you should be able to make this choice. Having and raising a baby is not easy and not everyone's capable of doing that and that's okay. If a woman feels like she can't do it then she shouldn't be forced to do so. Pro-lifers believe that you should take up the responsibility of having the baby but I believe if the mother knows she won't be able to provide for her child having the abortion would be the responsible thing for her to do. Overall, in my opinion, I would side with pro-choice, as human beings, we should always have control over our own bodies.
