Health care in children is important since it enables the parents of the child to identify the disabilities in a child early enough so that they can correct it at an early stage before it gets to chronic levels (Fleming, 2004). In the our program parents are given the best measures to improve on child health hence a decreased infant mortality in the county that in turn translates to the high productivity of the nation. There is a massive need to conduct child healthcare program for the betterment of the future. Basically our child's healthcare entails the following:

Regular Checkups:

It is significant for children to conduct customary medical checkups starting the time when they are infants until when they are 18. Well children are more apt to turn out to be healthy adults come the future.

Being in good health will help children perform well in the future both psychologically and socially. Other than identifying disabilities at an early stage, the healthcare program will help increase the productivity of the country in a sense that there will be minimal medical problems while at work for the healthcare program in children to be successful the following criteria has been adopted in our company.

Immunizations:

Most physicians prescribe shots at particular ages.

The baby should be immunized on the following in the first 15 months:

- Hep B: Prevents the child from getting hepatitis B disease
- DTaP: Prevents the child from diphtheria and tetanus
- Polio: Protects the child against polio.
- MMR: Protects against mumps and measles,

- Chickenpox: Protects the child against chickenpox

It is recommendable to immunize all babies. Immunizations improve school attendance. If you do not have a pediatrician, call contact a healthcare center. This will help your child get the necessary clinic shots.
