

Globalization has shaped the world

Economics, Globalization

Globalization has shaped the world, as we know it. Through globalization the world has become more connected with various stages of production taking place in various countries. Now, an individual can close trade deals from the other side of the world. Those accomplishments could not be achieved before due to difficulties in transportation and communication. It has brought about a global economic interdependence. The world poverty has decreased due to an increase in aid to poverty stricken countries all due to globalization.

Although there are some disadvantages such as celebration of individualism, unsustainable use of resource and pollution. Information now travels faster than ever around the world. The world population has increased and this increase in population has taken a strain on the world's natural resources. With these increases in population the tendencies of global epidemics have become very prominent and this is proof with the recent outbreak of Ebola.