

Trekkies

Science, Anthropology

Trekies “Trekies” highlighted how culture can be created as each of the performers talked about their personal experiences while playing certain role or character in the film Star Trek (TV-Tastic, 2011a; TV-Tastic, 2011b). Other than the use of language, it also pointed out that a star trek culture can be created as soon as people learn to accept the film over time. For instance, over the years, some people can become a real “fan” of Star Trek (TV-Tastic, 2011a, 2: 26). Upon acknowledging the story behind star trek, playing the role of some of its characters can become “normal” for some people (TV-Tastic, 2011a, 2: 31).

It is widely known that culture is something that can be shared by a common group of people. As soon as the acting of some Star Trek role becomes “normal”, then, it could eventually become a part of some people’s culture. As a learned culture, people who are active in playing certain role in this film can use some verbal or non-verbal cues as a symbol for Star Trek culture. Culture can also be created through adaptation. For instance, the mere act of being accustomed to wearing a uniform can be a way of becoming a role model for some people (TV-Tastic, 2011a, 7: 24). Likewise, wearing uniform can also make people acknowledge or accept the idea of who and what a person loves to do in their chosen career (TV-Tastic, 2011a, 9: 52). In the process of gathering people with the same concerns, ideas, sentiments, and beliefs, it is possible to build culture.

References

TV-Tastic. (2011a, November 12). Trekies Complete Film (Part 1). Retrieved June 16, 2015, from http://www.dailymotion.com/video/xmah25_trekies-complete-film-part-1_shortfilms

<https://assignbuster.com/trekies/>

TV-Tastic. (2011b, November 12). Trekkies Complete Film (Part 2). Retrieved June 15, 2015