In my opinion, the violence in media highly influence people, as our brains are highly sensitive when it comes to acknowledging new information. Our brain is not able to tell the difference between fiction and reality that is why we are afraid after watching horror movies. Some people are more sensitive to it than others and by this more likely to experience disturbance between fiction and reality. However, some of the sources that I have researched disagree with this statement. They believe that media has no effect on our nerve system, mental development or our behavior.

Overall, the opinion on this issue is divided. Introduction: I decided to concentrate and evaluate quite important issue, " Does violence in media promotes violence in society?" I decided to choose this issue, as in the future I am planning on becoming a psychologist. I found this topic really fascinating, as it's a global issue that affects all of us, yet not many people are aware of this. I grew up in the after communist system, where the videogames or violent films were a taboo issue. People strongly believed that by promoting violence in media the future generation will be more likely to become a pathological citizenship. Therefore, I grew up in a completely different environment than my younger siblings.

Since they were born, they had free access to all type of games and films, as the age range has dropped drastically to catch up with the changing society needs. By observing their behavior, I realized how different they are in acting and responding to particular situations. It really made me think, " Can media really influence us so much"? Nowadays, we have really easy access to any type of media. It's a very controversial issue as some people can't imagine their lives without it. The violence in media is increasing drastically and it makes people craving for more action and more violence as our emotional system gets used to it and need more stimuli to make us feel excited again and to shock the audience. It might encourage people to cross some lines and break the rules in the name of looking for more satisfying entertainment.

It most likely can lead to violence behavior, as this is what people been watching their entire life. They been raised on violent patterns which helped them to get rid of our natural instincts, like fear from death or blood. Also, their feeling was more likely reduced, such as fear, empathy, love or compassion. It changes people's behavior and it might lead to changes in the social system, media violence is not different from other risk factors for aggression. Aims In relation to the influence of TV on people:

- To investigate expert views and public opinion.
- To evaluate how effectively the impact of violence in TV influence people (especially young children).
- To evaluate the connection between the crimes and violent behaviors in real life and the promoted violence on TV

Objectives

- To identify, collate and analyze the views of academics and experts on the influence of violence in TV.

- To determine and analyze public opinion.
- To assess the extent to which the promoted violence in media change our behavior
- To establish and evaluate the impact of violence in media on our future generation

To identify, analyze and evaluate the sustainability features that promoted violence in TV.

- To assess the effectiveness and impact of the media nowadays.

Rationale for research methods:

- Research of expert opinion will help with several of my key objectives, mainly linked to the drastic change in behavior of the new generations. To gain a greater understanding of the issue I am going to use some psychological experiments, articles, videos, and graphs produced by well-qualified psychologists. In addition, to make my work more reliable I am going to make my own questionnaire. In all cases, it will be important to consider and establish the credibility and reliability of these sources. • Firstly, I will investigate whether there has been any relevant previous evidence that violence in media really rise the numbers of crime rates, e.

g. news and to what extent these are valid and reliable. I will carry out a survey and establish peoples' point of views including their expectations and the extent to which they feel these have been met. • I am particularly interested in the views of more mature people, as they are the best age group, as they lived long enough to spot the change of behavior in the younger generation. Based on this I will also design and carry out my own questionnaire. • I aim to find out if other people have noticed, the media influence.

This can be done by adding questions to the surveys and questionnaires, focusing on whether the violence presented in media have had negative affect on our generations' behavior or crime rates. It will be useful to see if people are aware of the changes, what cause it and what is their opinion on it is. • I will research the influence of media on people and the psychological reasoning for it to explain and develop my point. To support this, I intend to interview some specialist in the psychological behavior area.

They will have first-hand experience of the impact of media and the negative effects of it. In addition, to develop my research I will interview some A-levels media students about the negative and positive influences of media on people nowadays. • To determine the strengths and weaknesses of the use of violence in TV, I will consider the aims of the original designs and the extent to which these have been realized. I will research the psychological aspects, the rise in the crime rate and the changes in people's behaviors. I will carry out some research concentrating on the psychological aspects of violence promoted in media nowadays.

I have to recognize that my research may be limited because some records may not be available to the public or only available on request under freedom of information regulations.
