The main church was custom-built by the head of state Constantine and constructed nearby 349 on the site where St Peter is said to have been concealed among AD 64 and 67. But like many primitive churches, it ultimately fell into shabby and it wasn't until the mid-15th century that struggles were made to reestablish it, first by Pope Nicholas V and then magnificently by Julius II. Construction starts again in 1506 on Bramante's design for a new basilica based on a Greek-cross idea, using four equivalent arms and a huge central dome. However, on Bramante's passing in 1514, construction ground to a cessation as architects, together with Raphael and Antonio DA Sangallo, tried to transform his original plans. A small evaluation was made and it wasn't till Michelangelo took over in 1547 at the age of 72 that the circumstances improved. Michelangelo simplified Bramante's strategies and illustrated up designs for what was to become his highest architectural achievement, the dome. It has taken by Giacomo della Porta and Domenico Fontana to finish it in 1590.
