

Growing in my life at home, work and Business, Career

Growing up with a big family, meant growing up with different phases.

Watching the way my parents, siblings, cousins, aunts and uncles behaved with each other, with us and with everyone around them always fascinated me. I found myself examining their behaviour constantly. It was the child to teen years that I had found the most interesting. What causes and triggers their rebellious behaviours, what makes them more sympathetic or unsympathetic and what their thought process is. Psychological theories and analysis became a big feature in my life at home, work and in the outside world.

Appreciating the science of psychology and wanting to understand it more, I made the choice to study it and gain more knowledge. Wanting to learn and study psychology was first awakened when I had started to understand life as a teenager and how a person's thoughts and behaviour affects society, positive or negative. Not only has my interest in the topic increased but I am eager to learn and explore more. It is said a good psychologist can be described as a person who appreciates their own psychology, and I am working to appreciate my own.

Having a big family has made me more aware of how to analyse and deal with situations depending on the behaviour of an individual and understanding thought process. This has made me more empathetic as I have cousins of all ages and I now have a good understanding of everyone's needs just by studying their behaviour. It has made me aware of the triggers of good and bad behaviour. This interested me to grow my knowledge in the fascinating subject of psychology from my hobby to my career. I believe, with the combination of what I have learnt from my life's experience and my enthusiasm for psychology will make me an ideal candidate for studying the subject. In my time away from studies, my life is spent enjoying time with friends and family. I also enjoy playing basketball and badminton, going to my local park and playing with friends and others who also enjoy the sports, this allows me to interact with those who have similar interests and helps with my communication skills. A significant belief I have is that every one of us can make this world a better place.

Because of this belief I now do my best to be involved in charity events, I regularly donate and have sponsored an orphaned child in India to receive the best care and education. Remaining time goes to working as a retail advisor. This experience has taught me how to deal with situations methodically and improved my skills. I would be an asset to your university as I am very passionate about my subjects. The course I want to study will broaden my knowledge, satisfy my curiosity and deepen my understanding.

I am very determined and the course you are offering will be highly motivating to achieve life goals.
