

Good example of essay on a person
who makes you feel something, or interests you ...

Life, Friendship

ASSIGN BUSTER

The person who makes you feels something, or interests you in some way

Academic excellence of John is the first and foremost reason he is always appreciated by both the teachers and students alike. His passion and efforts in achieving the highest grades attracted me to become his best friend and I try my best to be just like him. John is a pleasant, kind, and helpful person who can become friendly and highly interesting to everyone. John is also very athletic and good in sports. He is currently the captain of our volleyball team, a member of our football team and a standby for the track team. Given his academic and athletic talents, it is not surprising that John is interesting to many people.

There are other reasons why John makes you feel something and interesting to you. Despite being very busy with homework and sports, John offers his kind support and a helping hand whenever someone needs help with academic work or personal problems. He seems to be very mature and sophisticated in his behavior. John welcomes every student in the need of help. His sincere help is not only limited to academic support for the students but also continues to personal needs, such as financial support for the educational fees. Several students benefitted from his personal tuition classes at their home. Offering helpful advises to address personal problems comes very natural to John. His care towards time, regularity, and punctuality show John's true credibility as an interesting person.

John is very punctual and comes regularly to school on time. He maintains the punctuality at school meetings and sports practices. He is careful in making time-involving commitments, particularly to avoid any delays in fulfilling the promised work or to remain punctual in the called-up or planned meetings. The last, but not the least reason, for John's popularity is his personality. He is well-dressed personality at school where his uniform remains clean, pressed, and properly tucked. He is also stylish in dressing outside the school at events such as parties, dinners, and get-togethers. His style and demeanor make even the smart boys feeling jealous of him while attracting the beautiful girls towards him. The ease with which he makes conversations with girls around him is amazing and worthy to emulate. Overall, my friend John is very amazing, interesting and makes me feel something. His academic, athletic, dressing and conversation skills are unforgettable and interesting.