

If nas ruled the world essay

Experience, Human Nature

We have all fantasized about ruling the world in our free time. Whether you ruled with an Iron fist or gave free Ice cream to your followers, everybody has rules differently. In the song "If I Ruled The World" by Nas featuring Lauren Hill, Nas imagines a world that can only be classified as "ghetto fabulous". Although this song ideally disagrees with everything I believe in, I support Nas' idea of unity.

The world that NAS speaks of is a place where you can smoke weed "in the streets without the cops harassing", "court without trial" and people are "more conscious of the way we raise our daughters". This may sound like anarchy for the most part, but Nas speaks of a place like paradise for some. Nas, formally known as Nas, was raised in Queens, New York. This is shown evident from the song alone. Nas speaks of problems that you would not find in many other places other than the slums of New York.

In the song he speaks of "Welfare", "weed", cocaine, "parole", undercover cops, and the list continues. These ideas may seem foreign, but Queens alone feels like a different world from the close by New York City. This is why I like this song. He did not attempt to speak politics or economy values when he showed us a glimpse of his hierarchy but he spoke of a world that Queens knew nothing about. Nas spoke of a peaceful place. This song was an effective persuasive audio essay because he clearly stated his main idea, supported it, and reached the targeted audience.
