Abu Dhabi derives its importance on account of the fact that it is the capital of United Arab Emirates. As pointed out by Tristram, in his online publication on Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates is a federate structure constituted of seven mini states that are autonomous in nature out of which Abu Dhabi is the largest. The remaining seven states are Qubayn, Dubai, Sharjah, Ras Al Khaymah, Ajman and Al Fujayrah. Tristram further points out that, Abu Dhabi is an island city and its distance from the mainland is approximately 800 feet. Tristram further points out that the reason why Abu Dhabi is the largest off the seven islands is because it consists of 80% out of the UAE's total area of 83, 600 square miles.

Taking each of the seven Emirates into consideration, Abu Dhabi derives its relevance on account of the fact that it is important not only from a political perspective but also from a commercial and tourism standpoint. Tristram further points out that even though Abu Dhabi is not as glittery as Dubai, it holds the distinction of being the richest among all the seven Emirates. This is on account of the fact that Abu Dhabi contains 8 percent of the crude oil reserves of the entire world. It is also one of the major oil producers and enjoys the distinction of being financially stable in comparison to the other Emirates. Even though oil is the main source of revenue for Abu Dhabi, the importance of tourism as a source of revenue cannot be undermined. This is on account of the fact that tourism in Abu Dhabi is improving gradually on account of improved infrastructure and other incidental facilities.

The growing relevance of tourism in Abu Dhabi is further substantiated by the tourism statistics published by the Abu Dhabi Cultural and Tourism Authority. The online report titled “ Hotel Establishment Statistics Monthly Report” (the “ Report”) published by the Abu Dhabi Cultural and Tourism Authority indicates an increase rate of guest arrivals by 18% in October 2014 in comparison to the same period in the year 2013. (P 2) The Report further indicates a marked increase in the hotel guest nights. To this end, in the year 2014, there has been a 13% increase in the rate to 993, 803 guest nights in 2014. (P 2) Further, the Report also records a total increase in the revenue by 4% for the month of October 2014 (P 2). The foregoing statistics amply prove the growing importance of tourism in Abu Dhabi.

One of the primary reasons for the increase in tourism in Abu Dhabi that can be attributed to the geographical factors as pointed out in the online publication on the Abu Dhabi General Information is that Abu Dhabi is situated on a separate island. Further, it is well planned and has extensive area and expense of greenery. It also has several modern remarkable structures and unique historical sites. It is further pointed out in the online publication regarding Abu Dhabi General Information that the greatest asset of Abu Dhabi is the perception that it is very secure for western travellers and that the weather is bright and sunny all throughout the year.

It has further been elucidated in the General Information on Abu Dhabi that it is no more being viewed as a barren and wasteland. On the contrary, it has quite a good range of famous attractions and any tourist will obviously be spoilt for choices on account of the numerous attractions in Abu Dhabi. For nature lovers who like exploring wildlife and natural wonders, there are options to go for wildlife tours to have a look at certain endangered species like Arabian Oryx. Further, this region is also endowed with different species of birds.
