

Good political science questions essay example

Science, Biology

In the US what have been the various bases used to assign minority various groups

In the United States, different bases form the foundation for minority groups. Race forms one of the biggest basis for minority groups; where classification of groups depends on the obvious physical characteristics like skin color. Ethnicity differentiates groups based on culture such as food or language. Lastly, religion forms another basis, where groups differentiate based on the dominant faith. Christianity dominates America, therefore, Muslims, Mormons and Roman Catholics form the base for minority religions.

Identify, compare, and contrasts the major principles of liberal structuralists and conservative behaviorists

Liberal structuralists and conservative behaviorists have major principles that form the basis for their doctrines. Both of them believe any society should have a hierarchy from where to draw support. According to them, hierarchies form the organizing principle of society. Both groups prefer a capitalism economic setup since they hold capitalist ideologies. In contrast, liberalists believe in individual supremacy, while conservative behaviorists regard humans as prone of errors.

Briefly discuss and explain the sex vs gender argument.

The sex and gender argument brings a distinction between the biological categories and socially created roles. Sex focuses on the biological difference while gender forms a social construct, where the society, dependent upon one's sex, determines the roles played by that individual. This topic has faced several debates with both sex and gender being confused with each other. Some people believe the two create different ways of classifying humans. Most importantly, People learn gender, while they inherit sex during conception.

- Dissociating from social settings - minority groups disassociate themselves from social settings to avoid places with rampant racism. This decision comes after evaluating the perceived treatment in those areas.

- Drawing strength and comfort from external sources - These groups come together, share experiences, and even seeks assistance from professionals in the society.

- Direct confrontation - apply direct confrontation, which involves setting boundaries for what qualifies as right and wrong. The victims can face the stigmatizer and report them to relevant authorities.

Briefly discuss what is meant by the concept. " The Social Construction"

Social construction involves how society categorizes individuals and how it favors certain groups compared to others. Most people live in segregation depending on their class, race, or gender. Such segregation results because society gives meaning to different aspects that form its foundation. For example, society can have a given perception about certain gender, sexuality, or ethnicity and this affects every member of the society by making him or her view these features from a particular angle only approved by society.