Youth unemployment remains a critical challenge to social and economic development in Tanzania. Youth almost doubled from 4.4 million in 1990 to 8.1 million in 2010, this indicates that there is an increase of 97 percent and is expected to soar to 11 million's by 2020 and 15 million's by 2030 (World Bank Organization Blogs 2013). Notably, the youth's unemployment rate is fairly low it decreases from 8.

7 percent in 2000/2001 to 8.2 percent in 2006 and only 4.7 percent in 2010/2011. Currently the BODABODA sector using motorcycles to carry passengers which has been considered as a better option for young people; They provide a modern and attractive employment option for young men, as well as high returns for people who lease them out at low cost on a daily basis (Starkey, 2007b). They also provide vital mobility on rural roads that lack conventional transport services. Men and women users rate them highly (even for transporting goods, access to maternal healthcare and transport for people with disabilities), as do development authority's (Starkey et al.

, 2013a). Motorcycle taxis are available, timely and will go off the road into villages; this has been caused by a major cause of unemployment and life being difficult. First of all, this sector has grown stronger due to the lack of reliable transportation in urban and rural areas. Second, this approach seems to be an important source of income for many young people who have decided to invest in the industry.

They have decided to buy a lot of motorcycles and rent them and while others use them. Despite the fact that this sector reduces the problem of poverty and increases income, it is unclear how much income is spent on savings purposes and also in which in turn would foster further investment and diversification of the economy. The current study therefore aims to find out the factors influencing saving habit to motorcycle riders in Shinyanga town particularly Kambarage, Ndala and Ngokolo areas. The significance of this study is intended to improve over time.

Saving money is worth the effort, it gives them peace of mind, options and more to accumulate additional savings it will be easier. Saving money actually does feel great. Bodaboda become a popular industry towards the provision of informal self-employment income generating opportunities for any unemployed youth thus changing the face of rural urban transport services in Shinyanga. They contribute to economic, social cultural and environment development of a country immense.
