

Answer the question

Linguistics, English

China banned a Nike television commercial that featured star James in a battle with animated cartoon KungFu master. It was alleged going against the rules that advertisement, and undermining the national practices and culture of the Chinese. Another advert that was banned was the advert for luxury products. The advert of the panda urinating on the streets may work as it aims to make the Chinese behave while abroad.

Being truthful and genuine is the best thing. Denying a coworker this information will likely hurt him and his wife. It is good if he gets the information earlier so that he can settle elsewhere (Warren 73).

Having a job is crucial. Maintain a good public image out there about one's firm is also good. Blaming a computer glitch may seem the right tool to employ in such situations.

Integrity and honesty are a virtue one must uphold. May the problems are more hurting, and they need to be pinpointed out (Warren 259).

Achieving the set goals and objectives is a motivating aspect. Taking shortcuts may seem beneficial in the short run but destructive in the long term (Warren 260)

Stealing ones may seem " reasonable" but do not become fond of it. People will talk but at the end of the day, the winds will carry the gossip away.

Avoiding any chances of being sued is a good idea because no one likes to have the law chasing after you. The company may sue you if the revenue-producing project fails.

Being embraced in public is an entirely a wrong idea. If one presents oneself as more competitive than other players and having more experience than the rest, then unlikely a situation comes where the management thinks you are the best only to find you are fake!

Work cited

Warren, R. C. (2000). Management ethics: Integrity at work. Journal of Occupational and Organizational Psychology, 73, 259-261. Retrieved from <http://search.proquest.com/docview/199343369?accountid=1611>