My education, leadership skills, and internship skills will make me an excellent intern who will communicate and associate with team members in producing healthy foods. Recently I earned a Master of Science in Applied Economics with a GPA: 3. 30/4-0 at The Georgetown University after earning a Bachelor of Science in Economics with a Minor Degree in Mathematics with a GPA: 3. 70/4-0 at the Pennsylvania State University. In addition to my economic skills, I bring to the table diverse skills that I garnered from different internships as well as computer skills that I gained through using Microsoft Word, Excel, Powerpoint, and Computer Programming in my daily activities. Since starting college, I have held my internships in five organizations. In those organizations, I learned how to coordinate activities as well as evaluating projects that enhance the achievement of an organization's goals. In addition to participating in research projects, I also collected historical financial information and provided consultancy for a manufacturing company. Additionally, I received training on accounting and auditing basics from my internships. Apart from professional activities, I also participated in social activities; I organized team members as well as tutoring programs in enhancing the provision of supplement class-teachings. Currently, I yearn to gain cooking experience. I am impressed with the activities that take place in Cooking Corps, and I would very much like to gain cooking experience from such a company.
