Demographic factors are the most popular bases for segmenting customer groups. One reason is that consumer needs, wants, and usage rates often vary closely with demographic variables.

Another is that demographic variables are easier to measure than most other types of variables. Even when market segments are first defined using other bases, such as benefits sought or behavior, their demographic characteristics must be known in order to assess the size of the target market and to reach it efficiently. Cryptographic Segmentation Cryptographic segmentation divides buyers into different groups based on social class, lifestyle, or personality characteristics. People in the same demographic group can have very different cryptographic makeup.

Behavioral segmentation Behavioral segmentation divides buyers into groups based on their knowledge, attitudes, uses, or responses to a product. Many marketers believe that behavior variables are the best starting point for bulging market segments BY -Armstrong Geographic segmentation calls for dividing the market into different geographical company may decide to operate in one or a few geographical areas, or to operate in all areas but pay attention to ego-graphical differences in needs and wants.
