Fuel and Food Poverty Questionnaire al Affiliation Fuel and Food Poverty Questionnaire Questionnaires are always the most appropriate tools for gathering different information from different respondents for analysis purposes. The quality of the information majorly depends on the nature of corporation evident between the interviewer and the respondent(Brace, 2013, 56). In most cases, it is always advisable that the administration of such questionnaires be done on a face-to-face basis. This follows that sometimes the responses issued by the respondents may be obsolete, biased and undependable if such methods as mailing are used. This however depends on the level of corporation maintained by the respondents. In most cases, some of the questions may go unanswered following the method of administration used. Some questionnaires my also get lost in the process involving none face-to face administration methods. Below is an sample of the questionnaire that will aid in collection of such crucial information relevant to food poverty and income.
