Literature review

The evaluative report of information gives the theoretical base for the research of this topic. The overseas study market is boosting day by day. Students in New Zealand are coming frequently. NZIE TAKAPUNA, BOTANY CAMPUS, AUT has become the famous destinations of study in New Zealand. This research shows that New Zealand is relatively successful in attracting and retaining international students. The majority of students who transition to permanent residence in New Zealand do so as skilled or business migrates. The research will also contain that the pathways to work and residence can be complex, and encompass many points of transition. These transitions points offer opportunities for education institutions, government and other service providers to ensure that in negotiating these transitions, international students achieve the best possible outcomes for themselves and for New Zealand. (international students: studying and staying on in new zealand, n. d.)

As the increase the number of international students, some of the major change in the program that impacted on the standard and quality services of the accommodation for students. The accommodation provider has to concern about the all condition of housing. They often experience difficulties in gaining suitable accommodation. In recent news of Slum warning over Auckland the right example that even some apartments have no tidy and enough places to live. It is so congestive area to live. (Pryor, 2014)

Accommodation is the main difficulty for overseas students. On arrival, some students are booked into a motel or a home stay. After that, students initially look for accommodation shortage or high cost of accommodation; they are forced to move further into suburb.

Due to high cost in accommodation there are many cases where students share accommodation with too many people. We will highlight their sharing housing's daily life with them. Challenges with public transport remain mainly around its cost and accessibility. These views will be shared by students and services provider alike. International students find the cost of public transport too high and can be disappointed that they might be not eligible for travel concessions. (needs assessments of international students, n. d.) The research of this topic will throw some light on the travelling mode of transport. Our main target will be the NZIE students and the AUT

University's students. It will be easy to conduct interviews with international and local students at NZIE and AUT.

Legal/ethical issues

The term ethics refer to the moral values or principles that form the basis of a code of conduct. In this section we focus on research ethics, which is concerned with the manner in which research is conducted and how the results or findings are reported. (hussey, 2014) This section concerns the worth of observational studies and responsibilities for the ethics of the studies. An investigator's commitment to the advancement of knowledge implies a duty to conduct honest and thoughtful inquiry and rigorous analysis, and to be accountable for her or his activities. In this research we will undermine all the ethics related to our research because some quarries can reveal the privacy of the student. We will find our answers with observation and by understanding the research. (ethical guidelines for observational studies, n. d.)

Primary research

Accommodation is the first required of pupils when they come from other country now a days we can see most of the students face lots of obstacles for finding the accommodation especially international students. However, in Auckland some area is so expensive; therefore, it is not pocket friendly for some students. On the contrary, in some area is fantastic flat and home stay where the pupils share the room with senior and they get the help to each other such as, they share their grocery, experience, study and job search etc then they get new idea, new learning, knowledge and new techniques with the help of each other that is wonderful for them. Due to which, we will collect our primary research with the views of students by conducting interviews that is why we can get know about students as what they think regarding that. Secondary research

The some areas are the slums in Auckland central city where are the poorest people living in overcrowded apartments; apart from, south Auckland is the ruler area. Ms Robertson said people who live in CBD they were shared the rooms apart from, there is some apartment blocks were dramatically populated lack of sense of community even that there was not any green park due to which people face to lots of problem for walking in the morning. However, inner-city apartments are vital and wonderful. Accordingly to Mr Turner in developed country built modern apartments during the time. (Pryor, 2014)

Qualitative and quantitative methods data
