

Morality and moral values

Experience, Human Nature

Raising a family in a society that is fast-paced and ever changing can make it confusing to know just which values to teach your children. As a general rule, it's up to you to teach your children what to believe, and how they should live their lives. But when it comes to teaching and instilling moral values, I'd love to pass on a few values to teach your children from a young age. These are simple and common everyday values that are quickly fading from our younger generation. Read on to discover what they are: 1. RESPECT

One of the most important values to teach your children is respect. Having worked in several daycare facilities, I've seen children who have no respect for authority at all. It's exasperating to the teacher, and to the parent when they arrive to pick up their kids. By teaching your kids respect, you are doing the world, yourself, and your child a favor! Life will go much easier for them with a little respect under their hat. If you have got to give a speech on moral values you have to stress the significance of moral values in life and should never ignore them.

Here are some things you may use so that you can present this essential subject to your audience. You can say moral values are necessary because the Bible instructs us to be moral. Actually, during history moral values have been the foundation of our education. First of all mom and dad, then school, and finally universities and colleges were instructing us to be kind, honest, sincere, warmhearted, and so on. Religion used to be one of the most effective instruments to instill moral values into people. Religion has been getting rid of its impact in many states around the globe.

These days it is still vital to many, but only for a segment of lots of societies. Moral values are still widely used as a debate topic, but regrettably they are often not that significant for a lot of people. The importance of moral values in life is one thing nobody can seriously argue with, despite the fact that today it is a popular practice. Many well known film and popular music superstars, political figures, and other successful people speak about liberal values - freedom of expression, religious beliefs, a hedonistic lifestyle, etc.

Their point is that individual freedom is the most significant value to fight for! No person can make you do what you do not want to do, so you are free to be bad or kind, sincere, or not - it is your individual decision, and everyone has to appreciate it. That is why it's acceptable to abuse alcohol, take drugs, and be impolite, rude or even cruel - if you prefer to act like that, it is your right. Freedom is the only value! Needless to say, liberal values are not that awful. The problem is they in some way destroy the moral foundation of the modern society.

When the Bible is no longer the primary instructor of moral behavior, at least, for Christians, there's a risk people will stop thinking about moral values as important. This is currently happening in most liberal democratic nations in comparison to traditional Eastern ones, where the religious impact of Islam is still big. We may discuss the political regimes of those states, and the exercise of individual freedom and human rights there, but there's a thing most people will agree with - they stress the importance of moral values in it; it's the key component of their tradition.

Speech on Moral Values and the Importance of Moral Values in Life: Are They truly Important? In your speech on moral values you have to find out the actual importance of moral values in life. In the modern world of income oriented individuals it's hard to stay a moral person; nevertheless it's not extremely hard. Many do. Every single day we hear that a lot of people are murdered by criminals; in a number of states they brazenly shoot and kill rival gangs members on the streets all simply because of money. Cash is the value. Not kindness or principles.

Not morals. Greed for money is the only driving force of these people! Every single day we see how people tell a lie, do everything possible to have the job they need, even it demands that they do something awful, against the law, or immoral. Young men try to have a girl they wish without any idea about moral values. This ought to help you with materials for your speech on moral values. We realize the significance of moral values in life, don't we? And right now, after having a short speech on moral values, we're ready to write a moral values essay.

Moral Values Essay: Writing Tips When writing your moral values essay do not forget to stick to the structure. Your essay should contain an introduction, a body paragraph and a conclusion.
