Ireland and that was the last battle in Ireland for seven struggling Irish centuries of food famines and depressions. Ireland had major struggles leading up to the 1800's. Farms were struggling to make ends meet so things had to change in Ireland very fast. They started leaving Ireland to find better life and they moved to the United States around Boston area.

The people that stayed behind in Ireland were the loyal and the backbone they fought through the famine that killed hundreds to thousands over a span of 100 years. Around 1960s the famine was no longer a problem, they had a new uprising of violence in Ireland. No longer did the Northern Irish want to be a part of Ireland they wanted to make a country of their own because of the political side of Ireland. So in the north the Irish took a rebellion, and made a small militia to protect their cause, create their own government that still advised by those of the original country and Great Britain Provinces. Northern Ireland was accepted to the Europeans as a country in 1973 and has been a country since then. Ireland also played a more neutral role in World War I and II they sent little troops to actually fight instead Ireland was used as a naval port side and where troops from Canada and USA would come to rest and train before moving west to fight.

Ireland also became a country of poverty a bit in the future in the 2000s. When the banking system collapsed shortly after joining the European Union. Ireland took those economical struggles and with the help of United States nationals, Ireland would fight back for economic stability and get Ireland back on task and their financial problem would eventually end in the year of 2008. Today Ireland stands under Great Britain, and its dominance as a superpower

There are many distinct features of the beautiful country Ireland but one of the most amazing times of the year is around St Patrick's Day. Saint Patrick was an Irish patron saint who is said to believe to bring Christian to Ireland and is called as a hero for doing so. There is a lot of great things about St Patrick and his special accomplishments that is why he is celebrated by the Christians and non-Christians.

Saint Patrick's Day originated in Ireland and was brought over to America. Since its coming to the states in the late 1880s, Saint Patrick's Day has had a major impact in larger cities such as Chicago, Boston, and the biggest city in the United States, New York. The most festive city of all is known other than "The city of champions" Boston. In Boston it's just all green, green, green just like Ireland they smother themselves in booze and sing the songs of Eire (Ireland) and her great savior Saint Patrick. The ethnic distribution in Boston turns out that a city of millions is roughly fifteen percent Irish and they are proud of it. The best thing about Boston is that the Boston Bruins embrace their love of this Irish culture every game around this time they wear green jerseys and during their game they are surrounded by a sea of Celtic green in honor of their heritage.

The city however that may have a lower Irish population but they definitely celebrate all of it to the fullest is Chicago. Since 2009 Chicago has dyed the chicago river and completely turned it green this was made possible by the 44th president Barrack Obama wife michelle obama. Chicago is the first city to do this but the ancient irish would dye their rivers green in honor of Saint Patrick.

However The New York City irish and non irish go all out. Millions of Green and the Knicks Turn their jerseys Green and they took on the celtics for the last three years on or they day after saint patrick's day. Which is why saint patricks Day that came from the great land of Eire is now a national holiday in the USA. Other than the amazing irish holiday is Gaelic football and Irish Sports. Gaelic football or irish rugby is one of Ireland's most premiere sports and has been around since the 16th century.

Gaelic Football consist of two teams of fifteen players on a pitch. The teams are allowed to kick punch or pass but they cannot throw the ball. Gaelic football similar to soccer is played on a field or as they call it a pitch and they wear uniforms called kits. Gaelic Football is ran by The GAA or Gaelic Athletic Association, There are more than Twenty Five Hundred clubs and the championship game is called Senior League Championship game or The Gaelic Cup.

Another Great sport is Hurling which is mixture of Hockey and lacrosse. Hurling consist of two teams of 15 the objective is to put the ball pass the keeper into the net. Hurling is also ran by GAA and has over 1500 clubs as well and the female variant is called camogie it is played on a pitch.
