Pundit Nehru came under the influence of Mahatma Gandhi.

He became a great freedom fighter and had to spend the prime of his life in jail. In jail he wrote several books e. g. An Autobiography, Glimpses of World History, and Discovery of India etc. He wrote his famous letters to his daughter Indira Gandhi from jail. He is known as one of the best prose writers of the world.

He tried to depict the life of the poor masses in his books of history. After independence, he became the first Prime Minister of India. To India he gave a democratic set up with a socialistic pattern of society.

He was a great patriot and a great lover of unity amongst different communities. He loved the children in particular and they endearingly called him “Cha-cha Nehru”. India made a tremendous progress during his Prime Minister ship. The world began to look towards India for peace and leadership. Nehru also advocated the cause of freedom of several Asian and African countries. He was the father of the Non- aligned Movement. India’s voice was heard with respect in the U. N.

during his period. At home, he was a man of the masses. Nehru was an apostle of peace. He spread the message of “ Panchsheel”. But unfortunately, China stabbed India in the back by attacking her. Nehru’s heart was broken. He died on 27th May, 1964.

His birthday is still celebrated as Children’s Day.
