What is container shipping?

Containerization, it is large and worldwide system of intermodal cargo transport by using standardized containers. This can be sealed and reloaded onto container ships, trucks and planes, railroad cars. Before the containers were introduced, it was time consuming and expensive to handle the cargo for sea transportation. The containers have brought change in that and it made transport easier and affordable than ever before.

All the types of commodities and the type of goods can be carried and loaded in ' the box'; as a result the modernized container shipping has changed the ways of transportation around the world and played a vital role in globalization.

Sustainability:

Since it is a biggest shipping line in the world, Maersk Line plays a vital role in facilitating efficient and reliable supply chains for many companies. It is recognized that the position of maersk line as an enabler of global trade have brought great opportunities.

Global trade of manufactured goods has increased over 100 times, from 95 billion USD to 12 trillion in the last 5 decades. Today 90% of global trade is done through ocean transport and containerization have played very important role in this development.

Employment Agencies:

These agencies make links between the employers and employees.

Internet:

The advertisements on different job websites, which capture the a huge pool of candidates who can apply in the company to get the job they are capable for.

Employee Referrals

Its an internal recruiting method which identifies their potential candidates from the existing workforce's social networks. This scheme encourages existing employees to choose the suitable candidate for a particular job from their social networks. A referral bonus is given to referring employee as a reward. It is the most efficient and cost effective method for recruitment.

Announcement on the official website

They Announce the new jobs on their official website i. e. www. maerskline. com. Website has the particular portion of vacancies and the whole process of " how to apply" is mentioned.

Evaluation of internal labor supply

They prefer Internal Labor Supply over External:

Those positions which are at higher levels and become vacant due to transfers, deaths, demotions and promotions, are filled by the internal employees who are already familiar with the required managerial roles and responsibilities of those positions. These positions are then posted on the notice boards throughout the PSO offices and are also posted on a software device that is displayed on almost every computer desktop at PSO offices.

The interested employees are screened, interviewed and positioned.

The criteria of selecting the internal employee depend on requirements of the qualification, age and experience recommended by the line manager

Selecting and interviewing Process:

Selection process:

1st Interview

2nd Interview

HIRE

There is a predetermined criterion for hiring of candidates, which includes

Logical and personality Test

It is the standardized instruments of testing individual's character of psychological makeup. It also reveals the aspects of how logical the candidate is. These tests play an important role in making the selection process easier.

Behavioral Interviews

These interviews discover the behavior of an interviewee. It reveals that how an interviewee acted in particular situation faced in the past. And it will predict that how he or she will act in the future. In traditional interviews there is a series of question asked, that has the straight forward answers

Like “ what challenges did you face? How did u handle them? Or “ what are your strengths and weaknesses?” But in the behavioral interviews questions are more pointed and more specific than questions in the traditional interview. Like “ describe any example of a goal reached by you and how did you achieved it?” or “ how did you work effectively when you were under pressure?”

In order to get selected, candidates must fulfill the criteria they are tested upon.

Interviewing Process:

Two structured interviews are generally conducted of a candidate at Maersk Line.

The first interview is conducted by Human Resources which are focused on the candidate's personal skills and capabilities. They use online or hard copy assessment tools to try to form an objective picture of candidate's personal characteristics and logical capabilities and a feedback is provided as a part of the process.

The second interview is normally conducted by the hiring manager - who makes the final hiring decisions and focuses on the specific qualities and skills which are required for the particular job.

The whole recruitment process usually takes 4 to 6 weeks; it could be vary depending on the locations.

Orientation and Trainings:

Training and development is a continuous process, and is designed to bring about a change in attitude of employees with respect to the job they are doing, the people around them, the new procedures, the new techniques and skills that they can use. It is also to make them more conscious of their responsibilities and how to perform them effectively. Therefore, all training is planned and coordinated in a systematic manner by the company, in term so identifying following needs and the skills required in the company. The training and skill development efforts are not confined to a formal class room course but extended in all directions, hence, helping to improve the productivity of employees by imparting useful knowledge and training in the areas, which are neglected, and to add up to the most of their strengths. The growth of the employees is not only a short term vision of enhancing inputs through skills based on training but also an effort for the long term development of employees by education and planned management development inputs.

Types of Training at Maersk Line:

Orientation Program:

Newly inducted employees are given a short orientation course to familiarize them with the company, organizational functions, activities, policies, procedures and programs. This type of training program may be arranged on individual basis or group class room training, depending on number of participants available.

The duration and contents of the course is determined to meet the needs of individual concerned in consultation with respective departmental heads.

Depending on the type of job, newly hired employees, as well as the promotes assigned to new field of activities, are given on the job training for a period ranging from one week to four weeks, as may be deemed necessary.

“ They make sure that people are empowered to do their job well”

Indoor simulators:

Job knowledge is an essential part of everyone's responsibility in any position. Since technology, methodology, processes are changing at a fast pace, it is imperative that employees should learn new skills and techniques through specialized and technical courses organized within the company.

Seminars and constructive discussion groups:

seminars are conducted to spread the awareness regarding different programs plus it provides a platform for the employer and the employees to socialize. Group case studies play an important role in a constructive discussion between the employees.

Practical exposure and experiences:

As a trainee in their company an employee will be given a responsibility from day 1 and will be provided with a proper toolkit enabling him to experience a “ real” job.

The Maersk group runs a trainee program which provides opportunities to get solid and a broad shipping knowledge. The applicants will be the part of business represented in many countries they are looking for energetic, passionate about shipping and eager to learn individuals who can apply as a Chartering or Operation Trainee in this program.

Chartering Trainee:

Market voyage analysis

Handling insurance and legal matters

The trainee will have a broad network of stakeholders including agents, ship managers, port captains and charters.

Performance Management:

To maintain a sustainable Performance of an employee, Maersk Human resource management measures some of the main factors which has a high impact on employee's performances.

Work output

Personal Competency

Goals achieved

Performance appraisal Methods at Maersk Line:

HR managers should be very careful while selecting methodology used to measure performance of an individual. Maersk Line uses the following methods.

MBO

Each employee is assign with the specific tasks and goals, and then the progress of those goals is reviewed periodically. Goal setting is done by mainly focusing on the Organizational goals. Secondly the departmental goals are assigned to different departments working in the company, then these goals are discussed with the employees and employees get to know what is expected from them, which defines their individual goals. Finally the progress of these goals is reviewed and employees receive feedbacks.

<https://assignbuster.com/the-maersk-line-company/>

Paired ranking method ranking employees by making a chart of all possible pairs of the employees for each trait and indicating which one is the better employee of the pair.

Forced distribution method similar to grading on curve; predetermined percentages of rates are placed in various performance categories.

- Example:

15% high performers

20% high-average performers

30% average performers

20% low-average performers

15% low performers

Goals achieved

The process starts when HR throws performance appraisal forms to different departments. This appraisal form has two sides:

Employee Development Report-1 (EDR1)

Employee Development Report-2 (EDR2)

EDR-1

In EDR1 employee he identifies the Key Performance Indicators (KPIs), the employees themselves set the objectives and targets for the following year.

EDR-2

In EDR2 it is the line manager who rates the employee performance by quoting significant performance achievements and deficiencies for the past year. He indicates what development and training will employee need in the future according to the highlighted areas in the current year.

When both of them end up the negotiation then the appraisal form is sent to HR department for further follow up of the respective training or development arrangements. This way the Performance appraisal system reaches to end.

These performance appraisal methods are very useful in order to maintain competition and for employees to focus on Key performance indicators (KPIs). And the results extracted from these methods become the basis of promotion, rewards, incentives, bonuses, or layoff and punishment for an employee.

Compensation Benefits:

Since the Maersk line is very careful in maintaining the equality among their employees, they never face any equity issue.

The wages and salaries are set on the basis of employees'

Education

Experience

Market conditions

Human capabilities

The pay raise is given to an employee on the yearly basis.

Maersk line negotiate the salary with a candidate on his own terms and conditions only when the job is highly skilled, when company wants to retain its loyal employee and when an employee is an exceptional performer.

Career Development at Maersk Line:

Maersk line is highly involved in investment in training and education. Over the years A. P. Moller - maersk group has its own training system which is implemented over the years and constantly updated. And it is directed towards meeting the global and international organization's particular requirement.

Their experience shows that the employee cannot be evaluated solely on the basis of written applications and the examination results. It is essential that the personal impression of the individual behind the papers should be evaluated.

Everybody who is formally eligible and has the qualification required for the certain position, can expect to be invited for the interview with Human Resource Department at Maersk line.

Maersk Line believes that career development is one of the most important steps in maintaining organizational performance. Maersk Line always helps its employees to build their career and achieve their personal goals by giving their best. And contribution which is made by the company is:

<https://assignbuster.com/the-maersk-line-company/>

Job enlargement

Job Rotation

Career Path Defined

It is important to recognize when the employee is ready for promotion, because if an employee will not be promoted at the right time he might get demotivated. Maersk line recognize such employees when there is availability of position and employee's exhibition of competencies for performance in the new role.

In case, when the employee leaves the organization when his/her promotion plan is ready, the HR gives someone else dual responsibilities for the time being.

PROBLEMS:

There are number of potential drawbacks in different stages.

One of the greatest concerns regarding relying too much on employee referrals could become the reason of limited diversity at workplace. Hiring from the same existing networks may bound a company to capture diverse pool of candidate, it is good for reducing cost expenditure but on the other hand it could become the big hurdle for the company if the company is relying on such method too heavily. This simple method could have many risks, e. g. when there is a need to fill particular Job the simple question is asked from the existing employees i. e. “ Is there anyone in your mind who can fill this Job?” In response to this question employees may think of the potential benefits for their close ones in their network, rather than thinking constructively for the organization. It is not necessary that every time a new employee comes in through reference is beneficial for the company, it carries risks with it, it could take time to measure his/her effectiveness, and if the new employee is not productive, eventually it will increase the cost of the company and employee will become the liability on the company.

Solution:

There is certain planning and strategies which can save the company from these problems

Communicate the benefits to employees for the successful referrals; give them rewards, incentives and bonuses for the successful referral. This strategy can change the way employees think when they are asked to bring the best candidate for the particular job, now they will think of the best candidate in their mind, who will serve the company most efficiently and effectively. The reward amount should be sufficient enough to motivate the employees who make referrals but not too much that may lead them to make referrals of unqualified candidates. The bonuses should be given in installments because the effectiveness of the new employee cannot be measured in few days, it may take time. In order to be safe from a big loss company should make payments of bonuses in installments.

The company may limit the number of bonus qualifying referrals that is made by each employee per year. This will reduce the number of employee referrals per year.

The mandatory qualification and specifications should be clearly mentioned and delivered to the employees who make referrals. It will reduce the risk of getting unqualified employees. All the requests for employee referrals should be added to the pool of the candidates.

Problem: 3

The advertisement for the Job which is offered by the company is very much important in order to gather a better pool of candidates. Maersk Line is highly dependent on the internet as medium of advertisement for the jobs. They don't prefer NEWSPAPER for the advertisement of their Jobs; as a result they are missing a large number of candidates who prefer Newspapers to find jobs.

Solution:

In order to get better employees a company must have a large pool of candidate so that it can be used for hiring employees when there is a need to fill the job in emergency. Newspaper plays an important role in spreading awareness among public. Since its an oldest and most popular medium of advertisements civilized and educated people read newspaper as a matter of habit in all over the world. Therefore it has a wide and general appeal. The message can reach a large number of audiences quickly. Choosing the best newspaper is also important, so the Maersk line can improve its pool of candidates by spreading word through Newspaper.

Problem: 4

When we asked them;

Has it ever happened that an employee might have left the Organization due to some reason; while the HR had plans for his promotion ready?

Yes No

They chose " YES",

And then we asked the next question;

With Reference to the above scenario, what did the HR do? (If the above Question is answered as a NO, then suppose a scenario with the above details & answer this question, what would the HR do?)

Promote an immediate subordinate

Bring in a Contingent Employee

Give someone dual responsibilities for the time being

Hire an individual from a pool of already collected CVs.

They chose the third option which is " Give someone dual responsibilities for the time being"

It may create a problem we identified, because in case of fulfillment of the job which has been left empty by the previous employee due to any reason, Maersk Line shifts the tasks to other employees. This creates a burden on them. Assigning dual responsibilities to an employee may become the reason of his/her demotivation. The workload given to someone more than his/her capacity may push them towards demotivation. As a result that employee may leave the job which actually creates a problem for the company.

Solution:

It is normal that when employees get better options and more secured jobs they switch their jobs. If we see the answer of first question we asked, it shows that maersk line has issues with their employees regarding their promotions. The timing of the promoting employees is not accurate, that is why it leads employees to leave the job right before the promotion.

The main problem is to put dual responsibilities on existing employee rather than promoting him/her to that post. The Maersk line lacks the succession planning; they prefer distributing the responsibilities instead of immediate fulfillment of the empty position. Because it is the best time to get benefit, by promoting the employees to fill the job and if the company doesn't find any potential candidate among the existing employees who can fill the post, then they should focus on the pool of the candidates. It ensures that the collected CVs are not useless

Maersk Line doesn't have any well defined strategy to retain their employees who are really important for the company's growth. It usually happens in Maersk Line that employees leave the organization due to some reason; while the HR had plans for their promotion ready. Recruitment is an expensive process, and when employees leave the jobs it is actually a loss in the cost incurred in the recruitment process.

SOLUTION:

Hiring employees is an important stage but to keep them in your organization is also very important to be safe from the high employee turnover costs. In order to retain the employees, maersk line should create some tactics to retain their employees. These tactics may include:

Offering competitive benefits:

Providing your employees life insurance, health insurance and a retirement savings

Give rewards and incentives

Provide some small perks:

Conduct “ stay” interviews in addition to exit interviews

Promote whenever possible

Create open communication

Get managers involved:
