Law intrigues me. The development in the law and the way it adapts to an ever changing society has fascinates me extensively.

I started to have interest in law after watching movie “ The Judge”. This has stimulated my skills of arguing, analysis and evaluating. In A-Level, I learned different aspects of Law, how the English Legal System operates and influence the society.

I enjoy taking up pleasure reading primary sources and present persuasive arguments in a reasoned, logical way. I enjoy reading cases, one that interests me is R v Blaue, which was explored if the victim’s belief determined their fate, would this affect the outcome for the defendant? The legal principle was, “ Those who inflict violence must take their victims as they find them” How incredible that one person’s actions could change law set out for the whole country? After completing A-Level, I have undertaken work experience in a company, Tricor (Services). I have learned wealth of local knowledge to provide expert advice in running business law. It provides me widerange of integrated training in the law advisory. I discovered how a law firm operates and was given a chance to assist attorneys in researching, writing, and helping with both incoming and existing cases.

My enthusiasm towards law studies seems superficial, so I joined in an international law firm, Naqiz & Partner Advocates & Solicitors. I switched in different departments: commercial; banking & finance; conveyancing. I learned how they provide advice to varied client based on wide range of corporate and commercial legal matter.

In finance department, handling all forms of loan and financing transactions are complicated, but I do enjoy. Plus, I assisted a case in County Court, observing the work of both barrister and judge, how the impact of lawyer's professions could affect the result of the case. I love the feeling when I saw a client smiling at the lawyer's hard work after completing each case. Law involves simple matters like helping a client to buy a house, transferring the ownership of assets, but it helps needy people in serving justice in a courtroom which I can't find any of these satisfactions in other jobs.

During high school, I had the privilege of becoming head librarian. I had the chance of giving speeches to my contemporaries, which trained me to speak in front of a crowd without any fear. I took part in interschool debating, this has further improved my communication skills immensely, able to provide strong arguments against others to support my own opinion, which is significant in the career of a legal profession. I also chaired the Student Council where I had organised numbers of my school's welfare and representing the school as an ambassador.

In the university, I was exposed to mooting, which is completely different with debating or public speaking. It involves parts of persuasive advocacy instead of supporting own opinion. I understand the importance of applying those propositions in order to argue which I tend to make extensive submissions in the past, which was wrong. Mooting might be nerve-cracking but it is fun! Academically, I was awarded the title of "Best Law Student" for my entire A-Level intake. Besides this, I enjoy reading. One of my favourite books is "To Kill A Mockingbird" by Harper Lee.

The author uses the characters to present the civil rights and racism in United States. An attorney who hopelessly strives to prove the innocent black man accused of rape. This has exposed to me both the dark and bright side of law, which motivated me to study law to eliminate injustice.

Law seems to be extremely difficult and challenging but I'm passionate in overcoming all the problems. I always work hard to the best of my ability in order to achieve my goals and develop the career that I wish for. I hope that you will award me with the privilege of an offer from your university for my chosen course.
