

Ethos, logos, and pathos essay

ASSIGN
BUSTER

John and Abigail Adams Letters Every writer wants to make an amazing piece of work to show off to the world through writing. The author has to determine who the audience will be and what the purpose of his or her text will be behind their thoughts. Then, the writer will ask themselves three questions that will let the critic be able to decide whether it appeals to ethos, pathos, or logos. For example, John and Abigail Adams wrote many heartfelt love letters that contained ethos, pathos and logos to and from each other when America was getting on its feet.

John and Abigail Adams long distance letters to and from each other explain ethos credibility of compassion for each other, logos logic of impact in each other's beliefs, and pathos emotion that shows way of thinking. John and Abigail Adams held a high standard of respect and trust in America history. That is why when John or Abigail Adams spoke America turns the quiet up and the noise down low so that everyone can absorb what is about to be gained as knowledge.

So, through John and Abigail Adams letters to and from one another the readers can determine both historical figures feelings for each other and America. They show their love by calling their significant other using pet names like " Dr. Miss Jemima," " Diana," and many more. Though, deeper in the letters you can see the attachment of America in the writing. This is shown by the announcement of rapid death, independency, and women's rights. As you can tell ethos means convincing by the character of the author.

Throughout John and Abigail Adams real respect and adored letters to one another we see the argument of love between the couples and the homeland that they take so much pride in day in and day out. This is John and Abigail Adams heart of the squabble. The readers of the sliver of writings proceed on reading to see evidence of love mixed in with friendship. The audience can see evidence of passion and companion between the pair with “ love sweetens life” and “ your faithful friend. Also, throughout the writing both love birds want their homeland to be theirs to call their own and to take full pride in where they live.

The person who reads sees this by the information that is exchanged in the conversations about what is happening and why it is occurring around John and Abigail Adams. As you learned logos means persuading by the use of reasoning. John and Abigail Adams letters show the readers a variety of emotions that set the appeal. The readers can see the feelings for John and Abigail Adams as hey write to one another. For example, John Adams always in some shape or form sweet talked Abigail. This lets the readers know that there is a burning ember of light between the two. Also, the reader can see that Abigail loves John more than just not a love but also a friend. The readers see this when Abigail informs John that he is also his dear friend. So, as you can tell pathos means persuading by appealing to the reader’s emotions. The Adams puts a little bit of incite on what history was back then.

John and Abigail Adams letters to each other explain ethos sincerity of empathy for one another and America, logos judgment of effect on a person, and pathos impression on relationships and history. With viewpoint showing trust and leadership that falls in place with affection. Trademark makes you <https://assignbuster.com/ethos-logos-and-pathos-essay/> realize that love is friendship set on fire and love is like luck. Passion that engages in recreations with your emotions on how to feel affection for somebody else is balanced and maintained in long distance relationships. So, alone we can do so little; but, together we can do so much.