

Computer science chapter 5 and 6

ASSIGN BUSTER

S- HTTP technology used to encrypt data and help consumers and businesses from fraud and identity theft when conducting commerce on the internet top level domain the letters following the dot in a domain name when you visit a website identifying the type of website scripting writing or using small programs that enhance the web experience and work across several web pages in the same way

HTTP a communication protocol that transports data over the web internal hard drive storage from a computer permanently mounted inside the computer processor/ CPU an integrated circuit that processes all the instructions that make it possible to operate a computer video card a circuit board that lets your computer process image signals storage device a digital device that stores files permanently so you can retrieve them later transport layer security technology used to encrypt data that helps protect consumers and businesses from fraud and identity theft when conducting commerce over the internet internet a collection of personal, local, regional, national, and international computer networks linked together to share, data, graphics, audio, and video

XML a programming language that provides a way to classify the contents of a webpage, making it easier to organize app tabbrowser feature that lets you pin a web site's icon to a tab so the website is always available static web publishing a way to display data from a web database using the database's report utility to convert a database report into an HTML document that a browser can display client side script a type of script that runs on a local computer secure electronic transaction a standard protocol for securing credit card transactions over the internet; uses both encryption and digital certificate query processor a part of the search engine that looks for search criteria in an indexed database and then displays the list of results as URLs with corresponding descriptive information

HTML tag a code that defines and determines how text and graphics will appear on Web pages dynamic web publishing a way to display data from a database by creating web pages on demand, retrieving the most current data at the moment that it is requested browser an application that helps you access the web and communicate and share information on it script a series of program instructions that can be embedded directly into HTML code for a web page web page an html document on the web that contains text, graphics, sounds, video, and links to other web pages privacy pane in a browser an area that displays information such as tracking data left by the websites you visit so you can remove the data and protect your privacy application service provider an organization that provides software based services over the internet cookie a text file that contains personal data such as your username, viewing preference, and browsing history

QR code a unique graphic scanned to open a browser to view a URL server side script a small program that runs on a server rather than on your computer site identity button a browser feature whose color tells you how much identity information is available for the site

IP address a numeric address allocated to each network and device on the internet indexing utility a part of a search engine technology that receives data from a web crawler and then compiles the collected data into an organized list of key words

ONCOMPUTER SCIENCE CHAPTER 5 & 6 SPECIFICALLY FOR YOU FOR ONLY $13.90/PAGE Order Now

<https://assignbuster.com/computer-science-chapter-5-6/>