provide incredible information related to my topic of research.

A well written and researched journal identifies that the environment of The American health care system is evolving from 19th to 21st century.

Therefore, the effectiveness of the 21st century health care system requires changing of the healthcare structures. The well-researched journal continues to identify that, strong ties among the different stakeholders in the system will ensure better medical structures. This relationship will facilitate better decision making and selection of better medical intervention to the American citizens. The proposed new health care structure will create a better mechanism by which medical expertise will be automatically updated on robust epidemiological insights and professional judgment. The journal further advocates reforms in the medical insurance sector to ensure that every American citizen receives the basic health care services.

Ellwood et al, manages to prove a new sound health care system that is based on informed choices, flexibility, diversity and professionalism. The system will further deliver a relationship that will fully integrate the managerial, financial, clinical and preventive elements of the 21st century health care system. The journal further advocates for the federal government to take all the necessary measures and deliver effective medical benefits to all Americans. The free, equitable and valuable access to the medical system will require the federal government to revise their tax code and remove the various bureaucracy associated with the system. Together, these elements will ensure an organized and delivery of a full array of effective health care benefits to all Americans.

In conclusion, the well-researched journal has proven as an important catalog among the collection to help me in my research. The well rich resource has valid examples, up-to-date and tested results that are quite crucial for the necessary feedback required in my research.
