

Annotated bibliography example

History

ASSIGN BUSTER

Annotated Bibliography [Coarse Annotated Bibliography Source Barker, G. (2006). The agricultural revolution in prehistory: why did the. New York: Oxford University Press.

The author of the book The Agricultural Revolution in Prehistory is one of the widely known archeological researchers. It will not be incorrect to state that he has a professional background that is relevant to the research of archeology that makes his research work quite credible at the same time.

The source taken under consideration for this paper is regarding the communities that have been long researched and debated by a large number of archeologists and sociologists. The fact remains that this book's objective is to assess the communities that have left mysterious indications for the research in terms of their social structure. The method that has been used by the author in order to conduct the research is the case study with an authentic usage of parallelism. There are many cases and facts that have been brought to life by the author. The reason behind using this source for the paper is because it reveals many important reasons behind the development and transitions between older and modern communities.

Source 2

Winks, R. W. (2004). Europe, 1648-1815: from the old regime to the age of revolution. New York: Oxford University Press.

The second source taken for the purpose of research work is one that has been cited by various researchers. It is mainly because the source makes use of a wide array of cases, chronology, illustrations that indicate the readers about the history of Europe during 1648 till 1815. The objective of the source is to discuss the main conflicts that were noted or observed during the selected period. The religious factors, societal aspects and economic decline are the highlights of the book. The authors of the book have rather become the reason for high credibility of the book because they are well informed and professional able in the field of history.

<https://assignbuster.com/annotated-bibliography-example-essay-samples-9/>

References

Barker, G. (2006). The agricultural revolution in prehistory: Why did the. New York: Oxford University Press.

Winks, R. W. (2004). Europe, 1648-1815: From the old regime to the age of revolution. New York: Oxford Univeristy Press.