Literature

ASSIGN BUSTER

1. When I started to research, I knew the following about my topic.

After doing some research for Paper 1's investigative question which consisted of the word "identity", I found out that identity basically defined who you are as an individual. As for what culture was, my insight was that it meant religion, the customs we had for celebrations or specific holidays and the way we dressed.

2. Now that I have completed my paper, this is what I have discovered.

Through the research that I did for my paper I found out that an individual's cultural identity can be shaped not only by religion or race, but also by socioeconomic status and gender, that although our culture may cause conflict, it's the best way of being social with others, and that each cultural group makes up their own norms or rules for accepted and proper behavior.

3. As I started the research process, my investigative question was: Does our cultural identity create conflict within our society?

4. My original claim was: In a world where being "different" and having diversity are seen as potential problems, our cultural identity can lead to disputes in the organized society we live in.

5. After I completed my paper, my claim has changed to: (Write down the thesis statement here) Whether it's the religion, race or disability of our cultural identity, they are able to create conflict in our society.

6. The following is what I have discovered as I read the literature for this class and researched "identity": Through the stories we read in the Literature: The Human Experience: Reading and Writing book and the researching I did based on identity, I discovered that there are many types of <https://assignbuster.com/cultural-research-and-reyes-professor-sen/> identity, that experiences are able to affect our identity and that our identity can create conflict in the society we are part of.

7. The following was the most difficult part of the research assignment:

Having to actually do a research paper on a topic (identity) that really didn't interest me at all and that required a lot of researching.
