

Cast away college essay

ASSIGN BUSTER

Group A ?? Zhao Rong 20062195 Outline 1. The purpose of the movie is showing the changes of the character's mental state. 2.

In the beginning, the leading hero is a person extremely sensitive to time. 3. The lonely life in the island changes him. 4.

4 years later, when he comes back, all have changed. He is perplexed. Even though he has enough time, he has no idea what to do. 5. By the contrast, the movie shows that people need a pause for introspection during struggle up.

Draft When Tom Hanks looks around in a crossroads, an untold sad feeling stretching here and there. At the same time, the director's purpose of shooting the film is clear. The suffering and pain during the 4 years are not the cores, while, showing the changes of the character's mental state by these are the most attractive. The brilliant contrast is the most important. In the beginning of the film, the leading hero is an executive of FedEx, who is extremely sensitive to controlling time. He pays too much time to work and always ignore his fiancée so that he just gives her the ring before boarding the plane.

Persons like him are very universal. They always want to make a schedule, making everything in control. Indeed, this is a behavior of self-expansion, or overbearing. They think that all will go out of order without them.

The mental state here is easy to understand. Then, when he is trapped in the island alone, time is seem to be meaningless to him. But he still accords time by engraving the stone. What's more, he is insisting on keeping responsible for his work. The lonely life of four years is flat.

There are no specific scenes or other attractive plots. It's like a pause in his whole life. During the four years, he learns to care others, even though it is just volleyball. He can introspect what he has done before.

At last, just like Robinson, he is saved and comes back home. However, it is cruelly that everything has changed. His fiancée has become a mommy. It is deplorable that he has been aware of the importance of emotion. Unlike 4 years before, he has enough time now, but doesn't know what to do except delivering the only package which is still kept.

And now, all of his efforts 4 years before have no importance. The end of the film is sad enough to make people to shed tears. Nobody wants to receive the changes happened in the character's life. Actually, by the contrast, the movie wants to illustrate that a pause in life is necessary. Please find an exit for life so that the success struggled for will have significance.

Essay When Tom Hanks looks around in crossroads, an untold sad feeling stretching here and there. At the same time, the director's purpose of shooting the film is clear. The suffering and pain during the 4 years are not the cores, while, showing the changes of the character's mental state by these are the most attractive. In the beginning of the film, the leading hero is an executive of FedEx, who is extremely sensitive to controlling time. He pays too much time to work and always ignore his fiancée so that he just gives her the ring before boarding the plane.

Persons like him are very universal in daily life. They always want to make a schedule, making everything in control. Indeed, this is a behavior of self-expansion, or overbearing. They think that all will go out of order without them.

The mental state here is easy to understand. Then, when he is trapped in the island alone, time is seem to be meaningless to him. But he still accords time by engraving the stone. What's more, he is insisting on keeping responsible for his work. The lonely life of four years is flat.

There are no specific scenes or other attractive plots. It's like a pause in his whole life. During the four years, he learns to care others, even though it is just volleyball. He can introspect what he has done before. Indeed, this introspection is needed by neoteric that always keeps working, and never stops. At last, just like Robinson, he is saved and comes back home.

However, it is cruel that things have changed. His fiancée has become a mommy. It is deplorable that he has been aware of the importance of emotion. Unlike 4 years before, he has enough time now, but doesn't know what to do except delivering the only package which is still kept. And now, all of his efforts 4 years before have no importance.

The end of the film is sad enough to make people to shed tears. Nobody wants to receive the changes happened in the character's life. Actually, by the contrast, the movie wants to illustrate that a pause in life is necessary. Please find an exit for life so that the success struggled for will have significance.