Interviewer: The first is, offering the same service with other Bogy's, how do you establish difference from them? Interviewee: Ah. Actually, it's hard.

Especially if you're starting out. You really have to anon... Ah you need to have diligence. I went through the phase.

It started after my second child was born, that [was] 2006 or [200] 7. I had to count batik [ I had to count lizards] because there were no patients coming in so I guess no matter in being can attest to that kaki even.. My, my way of thinking was if I don't go in to the clinics, more chances that I will get no patients and you can just easily say " I just don't want to have clinic today' dib. But if you keep on going and you establish your clinic hours, then the patients will come one by one and it becomes regulated because they see you that you're there always.

Interviewer: Next question ma'am is, how do you maintain your difference from other Bogy's? Interviewee: Up to now, I still have to do that. Even after 13 years of practice. Yeah. And at the same time, I'm. What makes me different, I do not... Like you're comparing government and private?

Interviewer: Yes Interviewee: I get to see private patients who pay me. I get to see patients the most with Health Insurance. I don't treat them differently. I think that sets me aside. And I spent minutes with you because you're a private patient, I will spend also time with an HOMO patient.

Okay baa yon? [Is it okay with you? ] Interviewer: Pop, okay pop Yon [Yes, it's alright] Interviewer: Yes ma'am. I guess you answered the third question that is what makes o stand out from other Bogy's? Interviewee: And, guiro.

Interviewee: All my hospitals are private. Interviewer: Is it important for you to be different from all Bogy's and why? Interviewee: Ah, I guess. I assess myself in terms of me having to be different from the others. My main concern is that I offer service to my, to the anon, to the patients.

And I still do it. And I earn money, right? Peer, it's not competing with other obstetrician, it's more on improving yourself as a person because you're you're you're comparing things this years. You have more now, or you have, you have, you can address more patients now. So I think, it's your growth as a person eh. Hindi Amman Gilligan young as bang Tao MO abase gung San Lang success MO eh. So if they have Health Insurance, they do not pay me anything. It's the health insurance which pays me three months later. So that's the difference between the private... Private, you don't go out of my clinic paying my secretary while in public, mostly, they pay right away without leaving.

So Young bib, simper, kale nail mass privileged sill because they are able to pay right away and they want my service for that. So Yon young anon don.
