Learning English is important and all people in the world decide to study it as a second language. This is because most people in the world choose to learn some English after their native language.

Nowadays, English is taught in schools as one of the examination subjects and English will be taught in their school syllabus. So, children start learning English in their young age. English is also important for our future. It is because learning English can make our life easier. We will be easy to find a job, go to an interview that needs us to speak and we can speak with foreigners too. In my opinion, to be proficient in a language needs practice. Reading, listening, and speaking are the most important aspects for learning any language.

It is the same for English. However, speaking is the main point that needs more attention to be fluent in English. For example, babies will start to learn speaking first and become fluent. Then, the babies will start reading and writing. So the natural order for learning any language starts with listening, speaking, reading, then writing.

Many people can read and listen because they are learning and practicing. So, in order to speak English, you need to practice speaking English frequently. When you study, don't just read and listen but you need to speak out loud the material you are reading and listening to. You need to practice speaking out loud until your mouth and brain can do it without any difficulties. It is good for you because it's easier for you to remember what you read and listen. By doing so, you can become fluent in English. I think English that is taught in school syllabus is the best way to improve someone to speak in this language. It is because students will learn their subject in English and they are forced to be speaking in this subject.

So, they will spend more time to speaking in English in school. Besides that, students will learn English in their another subject too like Science and Mathematics so they will be used to it. In order to be fluent in any language, we should hear and speak the language constantly. I notice that many people who are good in speaking English are the ones who studied in an English speaking school. They can speak English not because they went to an English speaking school, but because they had an environment where they always be around by people who speak in English.

For example, parents in urban areas normally speak English to their children as young as one year old. That is why children in urban areas generally speak better English. Studying English for an hour once a week isn't usually enough to make any real progress. The best way to quickly improve our English is to spend at least a few minutes practicing this language every day. Give yourself focus as much as possible every time you study, and challenge yourself to listen to, read, and even say things in English that you think might be too difficult for you. If you want to speak English fluently, you need to make it as your daily routine of your everyday life. Conclusion is, it is very important to practice to speak in English. Many English students speak badly not because they lack in vocabulary or understanding, but because they are nervous, worried, and afraid of appearing foolish at other people.

Fear of mistakes, fear of other people's opinions and many more make them afraid to speak in English. So, in learning English, we need to practise. With practise, we will be able to speak English.

The more we practise the better we become.
