Illegal Drugs Case Study:

Illegal drugs are the drugs which are prohibited by the government of the country or the international organizations.

Illegal drugs can not be purchased officially, because there are no institutions which can sell these substances to the people in the open way. The individuals interested in these drugs have to look for them in the illegal way most often in the black markets, where the price is extremely high. It is obvious that the majority of drugs which exist nowadays are illegal, because the experts understand that they cause addiction and the human being becomes dependent on them seriously. In order to save people from addiction and death drugs have been banned in the majority of countries. Of course, there are parts of the world which produce illegal drugs in high quantities and supply the whole world with them supporting its economy in this way. Although the majority of drugs are illegal, there are legal drugs which can be purchased with the help of the special medical prescription if the person is ill and requires these drugs to reduce pain (nearly all patients suffering from cancer take drugs to reduce pain).

It is natural, that drug addicts, who want to find drugs legally, try to get the prescription from a healthcare provider. Drug industry is probably the most profitable industry in the world, so many states have decided to make certain type of drugs legal and support their state budget in this way. The result of such a reform is astonishing, because billions of dollars started to reach to the budget through drug trafficking.
