Position Paper How many people do you think would want education to be free? The number is uncountable because everyone wants to be educated for free, most of the people wish that education was free because most colleges and schools nowadays are very expensive and not everyone can afford them. It would be very helpful for poor people while other people think that not paying for education would make people appreciate education less and it will lose its value.

Most colleges take advantage of people because of their popularity and their brand name and raise the fees due to the high demand on the college, people fall for that and apply immediately only because it's famous. Other colleges which fees are lower than most of the colleges treat people bad and tend not to care about education enough. Although some people are against free education because it causes some economic problems to the government, however I think it should be free because of the high fees which is unaffordable, also the number of unemployment will decrease and it will lower the crime rates in the country. I totally support this idea that everyone deserves to be educated for free, first due to the high rate of students that drop out of college because of the high fees that most colleges nowadays ask for, colleges take advantage of their popularity and their brand name so they raise the fees because most of the students want to apply there.

Somehow nearly most of the population is poor so they can't afford to be educated at all which is a very pathetic thing. Also most of the students that are now in college work at least two jobs in order to afford college and finish their semesters, so they do not have time to rest at all, They end up dropping out of college because they could not afford the high fees. Also some graduates have loans so they work hard after they graduate to pay back to their college, can you imagine the pressure? As well as their parents who suffer from the high fees of the courses and everything; paying the fees somehow causes shortage in paying some bills either than the college.

So when education is free none of these students/graduates are going to have loans to worry about as well as now and students won't drop out because of the money. Second, number of unemployed people will decrease and everyone will have jobs because of the free education and also poverty will disappear around the world or at least decrease. When education was offered without money mostly everyone will have a job that will cover all of their consumption and maybe not all but at least some. So the rate of unemployment will decrease and this is going to benefit the country, the government and the society. As well as poverty which is a very serious problem around the world but an easy solution for this problem is offering free education which is going to decrease the rate of poverty rather than increasing it. It was mentioned that some poor people are smarter than the educated ones so can you imagine what would happen if education was free for them? So it helps in increasing the job opportunities and this is according to the article "Should education be free?" So free education benefits the society because it will decrease the poverty level and it will also increase the employment rate. Third, the crime rate will decrease or maybe disappear in society when education was offered for free because mainly crimes happen when there no money to buy food or water, no money to pay rent for a place to live in, to pay bills, to buy clothes, etc.

So when a person tends to commit a crime like robbing a bank or a house and maybe kill someone for money. It has been proven that the nation would save a lot of money if they engaged people with education rather than spending them on crimes and this is according to the article "Crime rates linked to educational attainment" So it has been proven that when the government spends money on education is cheaper than spending money on criminal cases. And it won't only save some money but most importantly it will save people's futures and this is according to "Crime rates linked to educational attainment" So, A society with educated citizens will help in decreasing the crime rate in it so literally no one will go to jail. On the other hand, some people are against free education due to some reasons. First, an economic growth problem would appear because the government will face money problems when they offer education without money, there will be a shortage in money. Second, if education was free no one would work hard at all and they won't value the education. I'm not with these claims because first, if everyone can be educated for free then everyone would be able to have a job and solve the economic problem because they will benefit the country, the government and the society. Second, people who want to work and make their life valuable would work hard for anything and would do anything to achieve it and be successful.

In conclusion, to sum up this issue, offering free education is the right thing to do because everyone should have the right to be educated and to study everything around them for free rather than being uneducated and worthless and having a problem in finding a job. And when the government negotiate this matter they will find that free education is cheaper than spending money on criminal cases or on charities, also free education will help in lowering the rate of unemployment and in decreasing poverty around the country. So I think the government should consider this idea of making education for free due to the above three reasons mentioned because it would make other peoples' lives much better than before.
