The article illustrates the benefits of reading that we can have in our life.

The author's tone is optimistic and advocates are important because reading a book builds your imagination and contributes to the betterment of the country. First of all, reading helps us to be creative and inventive. We should read at a young age. Parents play an important role for children to start reading and make reading as a habit. Children should be told about the benefits of reading because people who love reading will become creative and inventive. For example, reading can help us to ease into university life better as we can join any club easily such as book club and it can help us to gain a greater appreciation for a literary field.

Moreover, reading helps us to become open-minded. A book opens our mind to the new ways of thinking, perceiving and doing things. It will expand our awareness and perception, so we can draw into conclusion without relying on others. For example, we can gain self-confidence, knowledge, and self-improvement by reading a finance book that shows us how to be a successful person. Furthermore, reading helps us to have empathy's feeling towards each other where we can understand or feel what had another person experiencing from within the person's frame of references. So, it helps the reader to have the ability to understand and experience the thought and feeling of another person. An instant, fantasy novel uses mythical creatures such as orcs, elves, and dwarves to explore issues such as prejudice and racism. I agree with the writer that reading brings a lot of benefit to everyone.

So, every parent should encourage their children to start reading at a young age because the nation needs someone who is smart and intelligent who can think further to become the creators of a new economy and bring changes to the country and the world. In conclusion, a person who enjoys reading will be a different person who had a feeling of empathy and compassion for others and we can comprehend changes and express them. Expressing such feelings can produce a calming effect that allows us to function beyond our self-obsession. Besides, though reading it can help us to be creative and innovative in solving a problem. Creative does not wait for a problem to arise but progressively work to generate ideas for improvement.
