

Abortion baby that never got to experience

Abortion has been a huge controversy throughout America even before the Supreme Court's ruling of the Roe v Wade case. This topic will continue to be a controversy until the end of time, but in no state in America should abortion be legal. Abortion should be illegal across America for many reasons such as, abortion is the killing of a human being, unborn babies have the right of life, and the abortion procedure can be harmful physiologically and physically to the mother.

According to National Review, The Department of Health and Human Services has devised a new plan for 2018-2022 that includes "serving and protecting Americans at every stage of life, beginning at conception" (para. 3). If we follow the American government's definition of life, then an abortion is outright the killing of a human being.

Fetuses are people even if they haven't come out of the womb yet. By conducting an abortion, you are killing a baby that never got to experience life. Many people believe that fetuses don't feel the damage of an abortion done in the early stages of life, but according to Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life, "Surgeons entering the womb to perform corrective procedures on tiny unborn babies have seen those babies flinch, jerk and recoil from sharp objects and incisions" (para.

2). Although many people do not believe it, an abortion does cause physical pain to the fetus. An abortion is even worse when you take in account the number of families that try so hard to have children but can't, they would do anything to be able to have a child.

Abortion is the unlawful killing of a fetus, which is an absolute violation of the fetus's rights that were given to it the moment it was conceived. A main counterargument that is brought up when talking about the illegalization of abortion is that not allowing abortion is a direct violation towards the mother's rights. If a child is deprived of life, how is that not violating the rights of the child if it's not even allowed to live its life? The father of the child is also stripped of rights. Ultimately it is the woman's decision. What if she decides to have an abortion, but the father wants to keep it? It's not allowing the father to be a father because the woman is not allowing the child to live.

Abortionno.com says, "We do not erase a rape by killing the baby. We do not cure a baby by taking its life. And we do not avoid all health issues by avoiding the reality of another human."

"Also, under no circumstances should there be an abortion just because two teenagers "messed up." If you are old enough to have sexual intercourse, you are also old enough to deal with the consequences. Like a baby, STI's, etc."

Circumstances surrounding a birth can be tragic, but ending a life should not be the answer. With the conduction of an abortion, comes many possible complications that can happen physically and physiologically with the mother. So not only is an abortion the killing of an innocent soul, but it can also leave a massive impact on the mother as well. According to Ramah International, some of the most dangerous risks that come with an abortion are "Pelvic Infections, Blood clots in the uterus, Heavy bleeding, and possibly an impact on future pregnancies." (para.

1-10). So not only does a woman risk having complications after the procedure, but a woman runs a high risk of death during the surgery, which increases based on what trimester the woman is in. A study conducted on records of nearly half a million women in Denmark reveals significantly higher maternal death rates following an abortion compared to delivery. The study shows that nearly two times the women that die because of delivery, die because of an abortion in Denmark.

Studies like these show the necessity in having to ban abortion worldwide, we wouldn't only save the future of the world but their mothers as well.
