

Computer games: a boon or a bane?? assignment

ASSIGN
BUSTER

We are now living in the era where people are trapped and hooked in a technology which also humans have created - the computers; computers which have become monsters in mankind, yet monsters of innovations, at the same time addiction. They are the creations not by God, but a product of humans intelligence. In our very competitive world, updates in computers are even one of the most controversial subjects all over nations. Countries compete to newly-introduced technologies; and even in a flimsy-thought, yet highly regarded one, on games.

The most common question nowadays is: Computer Games - Is It a boon or a bane? In a liberal and logical way of thinking, It Is a boon. In morale and totality, It Is totally a bane. It Is a boon because of Its benefits somehow. One can be attributed to the traditional mind- game which was before in a form of a piece of paper which now turned into a hi-tech and more complex manner -? In computers, still a mind-game. Thus, our mind works, it decides and it chooses, it concludes. Our mind is tested and challenged to gauge how excellent we are logically and accurately. And as I mentioned above, it makes friendships grow even stronger.

One's skills in fighting are improved in a silent but a bit revolutionary way. Yet if we go deeper than what is stressed, other people try to think that the way they engage in computer games are not ample, when in fact, they spend almost all their time in it. Computer Games - it is a bane - a menace to society - both for young and old ones. Behind the fact that they are challenged to be at their best in decision-making and reasoning, much of their time is being wasted up. Staying in a computer room for a long period of time is a big no-no! Yes it is fun to play, but it creates problems at the back of such pleasure.

Negligence to perform other chores is one; negligence to do school assignments is one; and lack of enough sleep is another one. Hence, pleasure is not good if behind it is a negative outcome. How can one continue having pleasure if it gradually deteriorates the chances of playing? Computer games then are really monsters that destroy the totality of a human being. Based on the above comparison, computer games can be a boon and a bane. It's for you to think at, weigh things, to decide whether you keep on being hooked to it or be wise to divide your time in a reasonable way. I just hope we use our mind and time wisely.
