Here You Can Find the Article Review Template

Let's see what you need to write this task. First, you should carefully read the article and pay attention to the main aspects and concepts that you will need to include in your research.

Be sure to take notes. Gather as much material as possible for your review article.

You must clearly understand that the review is not a description. You need to understand and analyze it and also provide your own opinion (if it is indicated in the assignment).

We bring to your attention a template that will help you when writing your review article.

- The first step, as in all written works, will be the preparation of an introduction. It should consist of one or two paragraphs. In it you should describe the problem faced by the author of the pack. Provide information and context about it to your reader. You can provide general urgency of this problem. In the end, you need to consolidate your thesis here. Provide a short but definitely specific article. Write no more than two sentences explaining this assessment.
- The body of your review article will contain from three to seven paragraphs.

Start with the author of the article. Provide information about whether he is an expert on this topic. You can provide information about his previous similar work. Mention the criticism of this article. Tell us how this publication inspired the author's life.

Next, summarize the content of the article itself. Specify what types of evidence the author uses on this issue. On how strong and substantiated his assertions. Tell who the target audience of the author is. This paragraph should be brief and be 1-2 paragraphs, and it is he who sets your analysis of the content of the article. Next, you will be able to elaborate on these points in more detail in the following paragraphs.

Next, you need to give an analysis and evaluation. You need to analyze how effective the argument is given by the author. Tell us if there are weak aspects of this article. You can indicate that the author has missed important information on this topic. Describe how relevant the information in the article is and whether it helps to solve the problems. Consider the structure and style of the article, to what extent it is well organized by the author. Also, give a description of how this article is easy to understand the reader.

- Your conclusion should be one paragraph. In order to draw a strong conclusion, you should once again read your main ideas and strengthen your thesis, which you represented in the introduction. Give an opinion about whether the article is strong or weak in the area. Specify the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of approaches in this article. Tell us about the impact of this article and your contribution to the target audience.

Do not be afraid to use your own unique style when writing a great review article. This will add only individuality to your work. If the article was originally written well by the author, then it guarantees you success and a good grade for your work. Remember that it is always important to focus on the strengths and weaknesses of the author. Just do not be afraid to be fair and do not hesitate to criticize the work of the author. Actually this is required for you/
