

Personal statement for finance (not accounting) program at imperial college

Finance

Personal ment After having completed my graduation in mathematical finance, pursuing my studies in finance would be a dream comes true for me. The offer of the Imperial College London at this juncture is a great blessing to me, because I consider getting an opportunity at this college would really be gratifying. I know the finance program which I am offered is ' ranked 1st in London and 8th in the world'(" Imperial College.").. This highly practical course will teach me the methodology and tools that are desirable to build up financial analysis skills which will be crucial in determining my growth as a technocrat. While in China, I had the opportunity to work at Volunteer Union, Suzhou, for the old people. I also worked as a journalist for XJTLU University in Xian. I could do fairly well as a journalist, and some of my works got published in the official website of the university those days. All these areas helped me to get along with people and sustain confidence in everything I do.

I was always crazy plying with numbers. During my graduation, I was very particular with the subject that even the solution to an easy puzzle would give me a lot of delight. The reason why I love to select finance as my subject is I want to concentrate on the unpredictable financial market situations in order to make stock analyses based on the market environment that involves a lot of mathematical calculations and analyses. To get real life experiences and additional knowledge on my prospective career, I have made visits to actual financial markets and travelled through markets like Shaanxi Finance Radio, Huatai Security Company and Agriculture Bank of China. Admittedly, my internships added to my experience and I clearly understood the required level of expertise a person must possess in order for working in financial markets.

After two years' major education in China, I left for Liverpool for continuing the rest of it in September 2010. My two years experience in the UK helped me to adjust with strange cultures and to take up a different view on urban and finance culture. This knowledge in cultural diversity is essential for one to act in response to the present financial problems in the modern economy especially in financial markets.

I have the strong hope that Imperial College London with its fortunate reputation in academic world can help me to develop my skills and employability across a wide range of industries. The subjects like statistics, economics, securities market and financial mathematics that I studied during my graduation have helped me to get idea about the operations of financial markets including money market and capital market. I believe that all these experiences and skills will help me at the Imperial College to make a better understanding of my program in finance and to develop a better mindset. My independent life of four years abroad has given me a strong and stable personality along with other skills that could be utilized in future. Hence, I am really glad to accept this rewarding challenge of one year program, which is devised to make ' young professionals for numerous careers in finance' (" Imperial College.").
