Family

I have come to see this show for a while now, what I observe about this show that comes out every Wednesday's at 9pm for thirty minutes, its based on situations that family go through today. This show is about a Modern Family which is an American television comedy series created by Christopher Lloyd and Steven Levitan which debuted on ABC on September 23, 2009. Lloyd and Levitan serve as show runners and executive producers under their Levitan-Lloyd Productions label. Depicted in documentary style, the fictional characters talk directly into the camera during many situations that arise throughout the series.

This show might not be agreeable to many people because they have different morals in bringing up a family. Many might not agree how this show, shows two males rasping a child. In my opinion I don't agree with two males married and raising a child. The reason I see this show is because of messages they show. For example parents teaching the children about not lying, and other positive morals. First the shows always starts with family struggles, miss-communications, etc. but always in the end shows the importance of family.

In a world as complicated as this, it seems that a lot people are constantly questioning and searching for some sort of guidance. They find the harder they search and the more they question the farther they get from what they are looking for. The one true and absolute answer is a very simple one. When a person needs guidance and substance in their life the easiest place to turn to should be, without a doubt, ones' family. A person's family should be the one place you should be able to go to when there seems like you have no place to go.

A strong family will stick together through thick and thin and will always be there to help bring things back into perspective. It's strange that a solution that is as clear as this is not so clear to most people. In our modern lives today, we are living in a fast paced world and there is only one person that each of us is concerned with, ourselves. We focus too much on ourselves and by doing this we forget who we really are. We concentrate on getting that better life for ourselves and in doing this we leave who we once were behind. The problem with that is not that we seek success for ourselves.
