

The typical bureaucratic structure of a medium-sized university

ASSIGN BUSTER

Typical Bureaucratic Structure of a Medium-Sized Typical medium-sized is usually governed by a Board responsible for the strategic direction and performance of the University and ensuring all statutory requirements are met.

The Board appoints the Vice-Chancellor who is, as the Chief Executive Officer responsible for the management and performance of the University. The Vice-Chancellor manages the key activities of the University through delegations to senior managers.

The delivery of academic programmes is the responsibility of the University's Divisions which are responsible for educational outcomes and outputs, including teaching and research capability.

The Divisions develop and deliver courses to students and undertake research.

The commercial business of the University is overseen by a wholly owned University company. This includes some of student services such as the halls of residence and recreation centers, as well as a commercial research and consulting business.

The Research and Innovation Office delivers relevance in research for the sustainable management of national resources to enhance social, environmental and economic viability.

External Relations and Professional Development support the core business of the University by developing partnerships, providing conference services, promoting programmes linked to industry and community needs. External Relations links University activity to the national and international community and oversees Employer Liaison, Foundation Studies, Professional Development, Alumni, Marketing, Liaison and Communications.
