

Claremont mckenna master in finance programme

Business

The paper " Claremont McKenna Master In Finance Programme" is an excellent example of a business admission essay.

Surviving in today's competitive world requires one not only to be well educated but also to be continuously open to learning opportunities that come one's way. After getting done with my bachelor's degree, I decided to get a master's degree in accountancy from a reputable institution, and the first institute which came to my mind was Claremont McKenna College.

Accountancy is a subject which has always managed to grab my attention. Throughout the course of my bachelor level studies, I always outperformed the class when it came to accountancy. I believe getting to do my master's in accountancy from your College would give me a chance to control the entire operations of a business since accountants, without any doubt, form the backbone of any business (Horngren, Clarles & Harrison 1989).

It's an accountant who determines what's going on the business, what financing it required, how to budget the operations of the business according to a given scenario, and who initiates a control action when things go wrong. Being a person who loves facing challenges head on, I believe nothing could be better for me than taking on the accountancy field and exploring the various possibilities that it offers.

After getting done with my master's in accountancy from your reputable institution - assuming I'm given a chance by your admission committee to become a student of your college - I plan to step into the corporate world and apply what I've learned in real-life scenarios for the greatest overall benefit of my company. Getting a master's degree in accountancy would not only allow me to learn new concepts but would also help me recognize the issues that accountants face and how they get over them.

I also plan to carry out research in accountancy in the future and touch those “gray areas” for which accounting treatment still hasn't been properly discovered. To mention just a few of such areas, they include environmental accounting, valuation, and classification of intangibles, determination and accountancy treatment if contingencies and provisions are applicable.
