

My purpose in pursuing a graduate degree

My Purpose in Pursuing a Graduate Degree Goal I wish to pursue a degree in school leadership that eventually prepares me for the positions of principal, assistant principal and superintendence in a school setting.

Realizing your abilities is one thing and comprehending and recognizing the potential in yourself is another. If one understands this potential of his, I think that person is the most successful in life.

Beginning with this word of thought that is I think the most important key to success I have learned from my life, I realized that I can do everything that I really intend to do. Some jobs in life seem very straightforward and uncomplicated but once we get into them we realize that we cannot simply do this! This was my situation when I was finally selected after so much of uphill struggle as a teacher of science and mathematics for the middle school children who are learning disabled. My very first experience in such a discourse totally discouraged me from teaching. I decided I would quit! But what made me stay was this thought that 'I am letting go a thing for which I have struggled so much! For which I had let go many opportunities'. To face challenges in life is another passion of mine. With this thought, I took it as my challenge and continued. But with the passage of time this challenge became my life!

This fervor of mine and the urge to increase my experience, led me to serve the emotionally disturbed children as well and I became a teacher of the living environment to the students who are seriously emotionally disturbed. Understanding the students' psychology is very important whether they are of any kind, normal, learning disabled or mentally disturbed. My self control has helped me a lot in this field because in order to keep things going right it used to make too much of an effort. My supervisors had believe in me that led them give me the opportunities of initiating new projects and activities of any kind that I thought would help these students. I realized I had the potential of innovating new and creative ideas. Making recognition of the potentials and abilities of mine has always helped me a lot in my life. Implementing what I have learned from my MS in Special Education and the degree I am working on in literacy grades 5-12, is what I have always worked for and this is what I have made my aim in life to work on. Teacher in NYC at Herbert Lehman High school I taught the living environment to students who are learning disabled, I was able to get to know my real potentials that made me aim for getting a degree in school leadership because I this has been a part of my life. Without managing things, making use of my entrepreneurial abilities and knowing more of my abilities and my potentials I think life gets too monotonous. And this is I think not just for me but for everyone around. The factors that have been a point in my life which made me go ahead were I think my dedication, passion and honesty with my work and myself.
